THE FATAL FANDANGO.

A STORY OF A MEXICAN DANCE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY HENRY L. WILLIAMS.

The festivals at Medellin, a garden land in the desert back of Vera Cruz, draw a great crowd from all the country. The railroad is beginning to stir up the folks, but still the fun is marked with the old Spanish stamp. Early in the morning the church bells are set ringing to deafen one, and on all sides firecrackers and nigger-chasers explode. Monte playing, cock fighting, lottery ticket selling and particularly dancing go on in the plaza, the streets and the house yards, to the twang of guitars and tambourines, madly plucked and banged by topers who howl machine poetry. The many colored mob meanders among the card tables, fruit and corn cake stalls, and around the cockpits where the feathers fly. Amid the laughers, horsemen ride, not at a slow pace, hitch to any tree when they fancy a halt, and join the promenaders. The torpid town wakes up with fever; in the doorways loungers parade their best clothes and jewels; carpenters for once work lively in knocking up platforms for the dancers, and the height of the merrymaking is reached when the evening shade and the sea breeze unite to make the air endurable.

The festa was only awaiting the recognized beauties of the township, and a cheer hailed the last of them.

Preceded and followed by serving men, a grey bearded gentleman was escorting his two daughters, also handsomely attired, and alighting from their horse-litter at the same time as he from his horse, with grace and animation.

This Don Luis De Mazar belonged to a Spanish family long connected with the mines, and plantations as profitable. More enlightened than his neighbors, he espoused the new enterprises of foreigners, and notably was helpful to the Americans. He was popular, but the cheer for him was a whisper to that going up when the young ladies threw aside Parisian dust cloaks on approaching the chief dancing platform. Some pretty girls were on it, spinning, but they walked off, as if acknowledging that the stars had come.

Carmela and Susita were indeed rare specimens of Mexican beauty. Their French muslin frocks were in the latest mode, but the freshness suited girls of seventeen. Their silk scarfs were fine and valuable, and twined round their slender waists with jaunty carelessness: the jewels and other ornaments were old but effective; their long tresses were drawn up high in plaits, and held in knots by gilded and carved tortoise shell combs. On Carmela's head bloomed a mass of scarlet flowers, while her sister wore a crown of water lilies. The former was dark and slightly the taller, but there was this peculiarity, that the brunette's eyes were blue, and her sister's very dark. This strangeness had piquancy.

Seeing that the two beauties were not at once going to dance, the other girls returned upon the platform, and commenced the characteristic dance known as "the Bomba." Its main feature consists in the performer having to unloosen by smart kicks and other evolutions, without using the hands, the complicated knots which hold the silk strings of the slippers, after encircling the ankles.

The laughter and clamor augmented, and to the "rockets' red glare and bombs bursting in air" were added the balls from Roman candles. In the darkness, too, gleamed the fireflies and glowworms which the two young ladies had pinned in their hair. A bordering of the same living decoration ran around on the hem of their skirts, and gave a fantastic effect as they stood, still awaiting full enjoyment of the admiration. Friends of the Indian orchestra stopped them to have a drink, and, refreshed, they dashed off a new tune, in quicker time than any before. It was well known and hailed as the "Petenera." Along the Atlantic coast it is a favorite, and the Mazar girls were reputed the best of all at it. Fandangoes went for nothing when their father failed to bring them. This public performance by ladies looked odd to one of the bystanders, a young American engineer, employed in double tracking the old railroad line, but he was acquainted with Don Luis, and was sure that the proud old gentleman would not allow anything forbidden by a society different from that up North. Besides, he knew the girls' cousin, Huon, who was engaged to one of them, or hoped to be, and he was looking on without a frown. With the ease of Southern manners, the beggars were not kept back from applauding the ladies, and the worst scamp in public put on the chivalric air towards women which astonishes Europeans.

As soon as the music struck out into the Petenera, any eyes that might have been straying came back to the Mazar girls, but they seemed as if cold towards the silent invitation. The three of four foreign faces, such as our fellow countryman's, may have abashed them, to say nothing of one belonging to a neighbor whom neither liked. This was a young gentleman in fashionable French clothes and a Panama hat of great price, who, after giving the musical leader some coin, stepped upon the stage and ceremoniously saluted Senor Mazar and his daughters. But, before he could say a word, another young man of two or three and twenty, good looking and stylishly dressed, leaped from the crowd and placed himself near the ladies. This was their cousin, Huon Mirazon. The young men exchanged a glance not in friendship.

"Pray do not tell us," said the first one, "that your pleading, though a father's, is in vain, for really we must not be deprived of the pleasure of their unrivaled dancing."

Gloria De Balgar had a melodious voice, his presence was elegant, and he had an estate which foreign speculators had offered to purchase; but he hated the stranger, and he was so addicted to dissipation that suspicion ran that he was an ally in the criminal exploits of certain train robbers.

The proud papa was vexed at the girls holding back, as he had boasted to the foreigners of their skill, and he hoped that the young man would persuade better than he had. They heard him with indifference, however; but an unexpected reinforcement came to his aid. Huon had glanced aside and caught a look from his American friend, Ralph Voorris, which caused him to say:

"My dear cousins, you ought not to resist so reasonable a request, for I see that, unless you dance, the rival villages will be thought to furnish the finest dancers."

Carmela understood that this time she was expected to uphold the glory of the county, and, whispering to her sister, she said:

"Why should I object to dancing? Your hand, Huon."

Balgar was angered, but he hastened to offer his hand to Susita; but she drew back, and coldly remarked that she preferred looking on. He had to bow and watch Huon leading his cousin to the side of the cleared stage. This was the strange scene: On one side of the platform fruit and liquor stands, the packed crowd on the three others, enclosing on one side Mazar and his daughter, Balgar and friends on another, with the foreigners in a group opposite, and in the centre the dancer and her cavalier.

The old Spanish dances seen in Mexico retain meanings which escape the foreigner, but Voorris had learnt something about them. The girl had been dancing with a sinuous movement and quick, unexpected twirls, when Balgar stepped up, and, taking his hat off, in a low bow presented it to her. She accepted it and held it in hand, while not breaking her step. Her cousin repeated this act, and she retained his hat in the other hand, making them seem with graceful swayings not unlike two large birds accompanying her in the girations. After a short while the American engineer, though his friends tried to detain him, came forward, and in the same way offered her his felt hat. In the dark, perhaps, all did not notice that he was a stranger, but, while Balgar scowled, no one else grumbled. Besides, the boldness was pardoned by the lady, for she bent her head, on which, still without pausing in the dance, Carmela allowed him to place the hat. Loud rang the applause, and "the Gringo" was forgiven by the populace. Darting on him a furious glance, Balgar replaced him as he backed out, and hung a silk sash on the girl's shoulder and tied it at her waist before retiring with a triumphant air. Huon had to step out with another tribute, which was his scarf, attached on the dancer to cross his rival's sash. The girl bore this load with calmness, and never swerved in her rhythmic movements.

All of a sudden, Balgar called out impatiently: "Bomba!" which was the signal for the band to cease playing. In the silence he recited couplets in praise of the dancer. At the first pause Huon called out "Lettra!" and in the same style praised his cousin and taunted his rival. The American, who was more practical than poetical, and did not swing his tongue in Spanish too glibly, looked on and listened quietly. With a final whirl, the dancer spun to where her father and sister had provided her with a chair, and she sat to rest, while, according to custom, the cavaliers came up to redeem their offerings, as in our game with forfeits. Voorris got back his headgear by giving a magnificent bouquet, and the Mexicans paid a stated sum, which the girl turned over to the orchestra.

"What an antiquated piece of embroidery!" sneered Balgar, as Huon was putting on his scarf; "I suppose, in your grandfather's time, it was useful to hang a 'toadsticker' by?"

"It does the same now, on occasion, and I shall be happy to show that the sword is as good now for sticking toads and other noxious creatures."

"Is that so? I should like to measure its length by a little cutlass which is having an edge put on it at Senor Nastrado's, the cutler's."

This warlike collision went on out of the hearing of the young ladies, but in that of the engineer, who said: "Hold on, gentlemen. We are about to inaugurate the opening of the railroad extension, and it will 'hoodoo" it to have blood spilt. At least, the natives. If that of a foreigner is shed, I guess that won't mar your jollity. So, since I have already a little quarrel with Senor Gloria De Balga, who is opposed to facilities of locomotion in general, and to us engineers, with me in particular, I want my friend Senor Huon to waive his claim, and let me cross steel with this fire eater. It will be a stock at your cutler's if he has not a sword to pair with Senor De Balgar's."

As Mirazon hesitated to let another shoulder his quarrel, Voorris whispered: "It's all right, old man; I do want to have a smack at him. I have not a doubt that he is linked with those ruffians who have made havoc with our pay and construction trains."

The debate was suspended by Carmela calling her cousin to parade the town, whereupon Voorris, backed up by his friends, hung on Senor De Balgar, and the two parties proceeded to the swordsmiths, where there was a shed in the garden satisfactory to duellists. The American was not a master of fence, but he had learnt to use the machete, or native cutlass, while superintending the clearing of the wilderness, and there is little difference between chopping fingers and twigs. In these modern duels, the seconds stop the affair at the first scratch. Balgar had received a slash across the hand.

"To you this triumph!" he snarled; "but you will not long enjoy it, or that of binding our once free land with stupid iron bands."

"You are away behind," replied Voorris, pityingly, "the iron horse will gallop over your grave."

"You shall sleep in yours first!" retorted the enranged Mexican, jerking out his revolver at the door, and firing at the previous speaker. The bullet pierced his shoulder, but entered the eye socket of the cutler, who dropped with a howl and expired behind his counter. When the others ran out with cries for the murderer to be stopped, he and a couple of friends were already in the saddle of horses held ready, and pursuit was useless. Besides, the preparations to punish were feeble, and in a hour the jubilee was going on, with just a check as the priest came over to the slain swordsmiths on a false report that he was only dying.

Spite of the omen, the railroad was a fixed fact. By means of it, Mazar and his daughters were to realize the Mexican's fondest dream—to see the old Spain ever sung, talked and mused about. Huon, formally espoused to Carmela, was to sail from Vera Cruz with his uncle and the girls. Mr. Voorris sent him a note by hand which warned him to carry arms. Since his slaying of the innocent cutler, Balgar had disappeared, but this line asserted that he was with the train robbers, and that they might have a dash at the one which the Mazar party chose. The local journals had printed a communication from a bandit, who impudently informed the traveling public that he considered it "real mean" when they did not provide the recognized "Salteador's (highwayman's) share," and he would whip the penniless, in future. The only variation from the procedure of our Southwestern railroad agents is in Mexico for highwayman to dash out of ambush on horseback, a kind of circus "holding up," which is more picturesque. At a point where the locomotive had to slacken speed, armed horsemen appeared, and presented blunderbusses and pistols to the engineer and his stoker, as well as to others at the car entrance. This was done both sides of the coaches, and some heads and guns were shown in the bushes to indicate that the cavalry were supported with infantry. Indeed, quite a crowd of ill looking scoundrels flocked out to hold the leader's steeds, while they "went through" the train.

Contrarily to what one would think, it was Mazar who wanted to fight, and Huon who advised paying; but he regretted his prudence when he recognized, in spite of his mask, that Balgar headed the thieves' taxgatherers. It was vain to resist, and the chuckling plunderers were so enrapt in their task that they did not hear the scream of another locomotive. Strange to say, it came the wrong way on the outward track! Before there was time to puzzle on this oddity, the engine appeared. It drew but three cars, and these were open trucks on which glittered gun barrels. It rushed down with such swiftness that it was among the wretches holding the horses before they could escape. Stopped very quickly, it backed so neatly as to range along the train, and the surprised pillagers were brought to bay under the carbines of the soldiers, while the railroad men, armed with revolvers, followed Mr. Voorris into the train, where the chief bandits were placed between their fire and that of Huon and Mazar, who gladly recognized the American. Disarmed and bundled out, Balgar and his lieutenants were bound for conveyance to the seaport in token of this rare feat of rescuing one endangered train by another.

"Don't congratulate me," said the deliverer; "In saving you I free the line of embarrasing scum. Now the company will let me have my leave. I have been just dying to get away."

"Going home, did you say?" questioned Susita.

"No, no; over to Europe. I am in time to catch the State of Jalapa."

"How strange!" exclaimed Mazar, but, perceiving a pleased look in his younger daughter's brightening eye and an amused one in those of his nephew and Carmela, he was kind enough to add: "I mean how delightful! We are going by the same, and it will be a family party."

Balgar alone had lost all by the Bomba.

ROBERT MANCHESTER.

There are few managers in the vaudeville profession today better known than Robert Manchester, of "The Night Owls' Beauty Show," whose portrait we present this week, and there are no managers with whom performers would more willingly sign, or who are more highly spoken of. Robert Manchester was born at Gloversville, N. Y., in 1853, and made his first professional appearance with W. W. Newcomb's Minstrels, in 1865, when he was known as Master Bobby, the boy wonder. He traveled with that company one season, when he joined Arlington's Minstrels. He next joined Prof. Cadwell, as a song and dance performer, and had to whistle the tunes while dancing, as there was no orchestra. Closing with Prof. Cadwell, he journeyed to Cleveland, O., where he met John Jennings, who has just left Morris Bros.' "Trip Around the World" Co. The two formed a partnership, and continued together until 1888, when Mr. Jennings died. Up to that time they were the oldest black face song and dance team on the vaudeville stage. They made their first appearance as a team at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., in May, 1870. They joined Howard, Langrishe & Carl's Minstrels about 1871, for the season, when they again played dates in the principal vaudeville theatres of the country. In 1873 they joined Barnum's Circus. The season of 1874-5 was spent at Pittsburg, under Fred Aimes' management, at Trimball's Varieties. On July 21, 1875, Mr. Manchester married Emma Foos, of Painesville, O., where Mr. Manchester now owns a beautiful residence, and where they reside when not on the road. The Fall of 1875 Manchester and Jennings joined E. S. Washburn's "Last Sensation," remaining with that attraction two seasons. They joined Kelly & Leon's Minstrels for part of the season of 1877-8, after which they went to Chicago, Ill., to join Hooley, Haverly & Maguire's Minstrels, replacing Mackin and Wilson—the present Francis Wilson, of "The Merry Monarch" Co. The next season they played dates. In 1879 they joined M. B. Leavitt, remaining with him until the Spring of 1881, when Williams, Manchester & Jennings' Specialty Co. was organized. This attraction was on the road two seasons, during which time the proprietors lost money. In 1883 Manchester and Jennings rejoined M. B. Leavitt, and remained with his attractions until the Spring of 1885. In 1886 Mr. Manchester organized "The Night Owls," which opened their season Sept. 24, at the London Theatre, this city, with B. S. Hodges as business manager. The success of the enterprise is well known to all CLIPPER readers. It is considered one of the best burlesque attractions on the road, and is always sure of big business wherever booked. Many house managers give "The Night Owls" any date Mr. Manchester wants, rather than have him book at a rival house. Next season he will have two companies on the road. The new attraction will be known as "The French Folly Burlesquers," and will be equally as strong as "The Night Owls' Beauty Show." They will carry all their own scenery, which is now being painted by De La Harpe, of Hyde & Behman's Theatre, Brooklyn, and will have some of the finest printing on the road. If energy, perseverance and strict attention to business will make a company successful, Mr. Manchester's two attractions should be at the top next year. Sam Bernard will be the business manager of the "The French Folly Burlesquers," while B. S. Hodges will be Mr. Manchester's right bower with "The Night Owls' Beauty Show."

When Pluck Was Slang.

This word affords an instance of the way in which slang words in the course of time become adopted into current English. We now meet with "pluck" and "plucky" as the recognized equivalents of "courage" and "courageous." An entry in Sir Walter Scott's Journal shows that in 1827 the word had not yet lost its low character. He says (vol. II, p. 30), "want of that article blackguardly called pluck." Its origin is obvious. From early times the heart has been popularly regarded as the seat of courage. Now, when a butcher lays open a carcass he divides the great vessels of the heart, cuts through the windpipe, and then plucks out together the united heart and lungs—lights he calls them—and he terms the united mass "the pluck."

Turned 'Em Away.

[By Cable to the New York Clipper.]

HAMBURG, Ger., May 18.—The African-American Character Concert Co. arrived here in good shape and opened last night to a packed house. Hundreds were turned away. The performance moved smoothly and the forty odd genuine negro vocalists, dancers and specialists acquitted themselves very creditably. Mme. Selika (the "Black Patti") was encored to the echo, and received floral tributes in abundance. Mintz Mason and Carrie Brown scored distincts hits, and the male quartet went like wild fire. The company have created quite a big sensation in and around the city. The management have hit the bull's eye squarely in their aim of illustrating every phase of the American negro character, from the cradle to old age and from slavery to citizenship. The prospects for a long and successful engagement are very rosy. WM. FOOTE.

DURING the engagement of Vreeland's Operatic Minstrels at Holyoke, Mass., May 8, Joe Dillon, the middleman, was presented with a beautiful gold headed cane and several floral pieces.

WESTLAKE'S NEW ORLEANS MUSEUM remains at Kingston, N. Y., until May 23. Business has been very good of late, according to Proprietor W. D. Westlake, who came to New York on Brooklyn Handicap day, and was on Tenny, with a few others. Signorella, the fire eater, joined Col. Westlake's forces this week.

D. L. SHIELDS, late treasurer of the Grand Opera House, Los Angeles, Cal., is a recent addition to W. S. Cleveland's executive forces.

WM. H. T. SHADE, who has been prominently identified with W. S. Cleveland's enterprises during the past five years, will have charge of one of the Cleveland Minstrel Companies next season.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington.—"Shiloh" closed the season May 16 at Rapley's National Theatre, having played a moderate week's business. The National will reopen 27 for a season of Summer opera, by the Lamont Opera Co., under the direction of Sam W. Fort, with the following people: Helen Lamont, Lizzie Annandale, Beatrice Tiffany, Marion Weller, Wm. Pruette, Walter Allen, Kirtland Calhoun, J. W. Glisson, E. W. Gubbe, M. J. Thomas and a chorus of twenty four voices, with William Robinson as musical director. "Mynheer Jan," by the Carleton Opera Co., drew fair houses to Albaugh's Grand Opera House last week, it being the third week of the Summer engagement of that company. "Irish Luck," at Harris' Bijou, was played to very light business. The U. S. Marine Band, at the Academy of Music, had an overflowing house 15. Sam T. Jack's Creoles, at Kernan's Theatre, scored one of the best weeks of the season, playing to the capacity of the house during the engagement. This house closed its season 16, and will reopen in about two months. During this interval alterations and improvements will be made, and The house will thereafter be known as Kernan's New Lyceum Theatre. The variety bill at the Globe Theatre had fair patronage, Rapley's National and Kernan's Theatre having closed 17, it leaves our playgoers very little choice.

WHITE TENTS.

Among the Big 'Uns.

A great deal of interest is just now centered in the big triangle circus war going on in the West, between the Forepaugh, Sells Bros. and Barnum & Bailey skirmishing cars. Sells will soon be out of reach of the Barnum-Bailey brigades, but just where the battle between them and Forepaugh will end remains to be seen. It will be a sort of life and death struggle, and it is doubtful if either will come out ahead financially. The war paint is on, however, and the various press agents are dipping their pens in logwood. And this is remindful of the fact that there has not been a real live, stand up and knock down fight between any of the big shows since the white elephant war, and that little difficulty cost so much money that both shows engaged therein gladly made terms of peace.....Notwithstanding the hostilities started so early in the season, all tent shows have, so far, met with fair success. The weather has been favorable, and the outlook is generally good.....John Robinson has created unusual comment by branching out on a somewhat broader scale than heretofore, but knowing ones seem to think he is adhering too closely to small towns and the "old route" to make any great success with his new spectacular adjunct, "The Queen of Sheba." .....King & Franklin have marched to the fore with a vastly improved outfit. Mme. Marantute, the famous long distance rider and race track heroine, has become a feature of this show, and with her celebrated leaping horse, Pile Walker, proves a big drawing card.....Once more the glorious spectacle of "Nero" is the star feature of the Barnum & Bailey Show, much to the disappointment of circus performers. But Mr. Bailey seems to know just what best suits the public taste, and novelty is what he always aims at.....Again the rumor is current that an American syndicate is being formed to establish one of the most gigantic circus schemes yet projected. The names of the organizers are withheld for prudential reasons, but there is a surprise ahead, just the same.....Arlington & Washburn are wending their way East, and upon several occasions they have had the temerity to jump right into some of the Barnum stands even after the big show was billed. They seemed to say: "Who's afraid?".....Ringling Bros., the young Western showmen who received their first schooling from "Yankee" Robinson, have come out in formidable shape this Spring. They are now in Wisconsin, and will work their way up into the Dakotas, and possibly visit the Winnipeg country ere they start East. This show, by the way, gives promise of a very bright future.....The Meers Sisters, Reed Sisters, Cleas and Hanlons, all imported performers, are making great hits with the American public, and if all were placed on one programme they would certainly make things interesting to a high degree.

THE right of the City of Chicago to issue a permit to the Forepaugh Show to locate on the lake front, between Madison and Randolph Streets, was practically conceded last week by Judge Hawes, of that city. Judge Shepard had recently granted an injunction, upon application of Montgomery Ward & Co., restraining the North and West Chicago street railroads and the Illinois Central and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Companies from obstructing the ground which the circus proposed to occupy. The matter came before Judge Hawes on appeal, and, while a further decision is to be rendered, his ruling indicates that he will maintain the right of the city to issue the permit to the circus. Montgomery Ward and others own the property on Michigan Avenue, between Washington and Madison Streets, facing east, and they claimed the city was using the place for a dumping ground. An agent for the circus now seeks authority to put up a tent, offering to pay $300 a day for the privilege for one week, and to give a bond of $5,000 for the removal of any debris. The injunction granted by Judge Shepard, however, prevented the city from issuing the permit to the circus, and Judge Hawes was asked to modify the restraining order. After hearing the arguments of counsel, Judge Hawes expressed an opinion. He thought the injunction as granted by Judge Shepard was too broad. It enjoined the city from using the ground for any purpose whatever. According to the writ, the city could not improve the square. For twenty years, Judge Hawes said, the city had abandoned the ground, and now it was nothing more than a mudhole. If the land was dedicated for a public park, the city had sadly neglected its undertaking. The court had grave doubts whether a private individual had a right to enjoin a corporation like the City of Chicago from using the square in its present condition, for such temporary uses as is now sought. If the land was a public park, ornamented and beautified, and a resort for the public, then an entirely different question would be presented. But such was not the case, and he wanted authorities on the point whether or not, under existing circumstances, an abutting property owner had the standing in a court of equity to prevent a temporary use of the "mudhole," as he persistently called it.

NOTES FROM THE LEE SHOW.—Chas. Lee's Great London Circus, Museum and Menagerie opened their season at Canton, Pa., May 2, to reported good business. We have a strong sideshow, making a feature of it. Prof. Delmonte and Alma Thorn head the bill. Our ring performance is running as smoothly as glass, with a programme that receives plenty of applause. Mrs. Chas. Lee laid off three days last week, with a severe case of the grip, but is sufficiently recovered to perform her dogs and ponies. At Orangeville, Pa., a magnificent leopard died. On 6 we put up our canvas on a field, with fully one inch of snow on it, not expecting to show, but to our surprise and pleasure we had a nice house. Lall Eggleston is doing the singing and talking clown. Billy and Jessie Clifton are closing the concert in a funny sketch, entitled "Duffy's Glass Eye." Mlle. Cerili, skirt dancer, is a feature of the concert. We are all proud of our show, and are under the impression that it is the best wagon show on the road. Mr. Lee purchased a splendid grey horse May 1, which he is breaking for Willie Howard's bounding jockey act."

GEORGE HATHAWAY, aged thirty one years, residing at Montpelier, Vt., an employe of Barnum's Circus, fell out of his berth on a sleeping car, near Lancaster, Pa., May 9, alighting on his back. Mr. Hathaway climbed into his berth again, feeling no bad effects from his fall. When he attempted to rise on Sunday morning he found that he had lost all power in his left arm, face and side. He was sent to the Pennsylvania Hospital 11, where it was found that his left side was partially paralyzed.

THE W. C. COUP EQUESCURRICULUM, AND ANDY MCDONALD'S WORLD'S FAIR CIRCUS, opened its tenth season at Chicago May 4 to packed canvas. The show uses a 120ft. round top, with two 50ft. middle pieces. N. D. ROBERTS is now assistant press agent of the John Robinson Circus.

JOHN W. FLORENCE is not dead. He has fully recovered from a severe attack of blood poisoning, which laid him up at Cincinnati for several weeks, and was probably the foundation of the rumor concerning his demise. Mr. Florence joined the Forepaugh Show at Indianapolis, and is playing the calliope in the parade as of yore.

NAT COMSTOCK has joined hands with Floyd Trover and Eddie McDonald. They will now be known as Trover, Comstock and McDonald, and are with Logan's Circus.

ROSTER OF DOWNIE & GALLAGHER'S UNITED R. R. SHOWS: Downie & Gallagher, proprietors; Andrew Downie, manager; J. P. Gallagher, treasurer; Dock Downie, assistant treasurer; Ed. Pauglom, boss hostler, with four assistants; Fred Wapham's silver cornet band of 12 pieces; A. B. Butler, contractor; Wm. Stevenson, boss billposter, with four assistants; Fred Monroe, steward, and four assistants. They opened the season at Greenville, Mich., May 9.

A. F. TUTTLE'S PAVILION SHOW ran out of gasoline at Gusher, Pa., May 13, and, as they showed near the gas line, they had it piped in the tent, and the night performance was illuminated with natural gas.

THEODORE F. WOOD, who has suffered with lung trouble for the past three years, has entirely recovered his health. He will put a museum and medicine show on the road, with fifteen people, about June 1.

THE WINTERMUTE BROS.' CIRCUS opened their season in Wisconsin April 29 to good business, which has continued ever since. Everything is new, including the 100ft. round top, 50ft. dress tent, new horse tent, band wagon and cages. The show travels by wagon, and has forty head of horses. The roster: Harry, Thomas and Halsey Wintermute, proprietors; Thos. Mitchell, boss hostler, with ten assistants; Jos. Eidenharten, boss canvasman, with fifteen assistants; Walter R. Hinman, leader of band, with ten musicians; Frank Cushing, Mrs. Cushing, Mack Owen, Kittie Murphy, Chester Roy, Jennie Cairns, James Cunningham, George Russell, Walter Taylor, Dick Saunders, Jos. Bullinger and Henry Huyke.

THE heirs of Harry Evarts, the Little Giant Orator, who was killed on the Grand Trunk two years ago, are now battling with the United States Accident Co., on an appeal from the $5,000 verdict obtained.

CHARLEY REID, for many years connected with the Forepaugh advance forces, is not on the road this season. He is now attending to the advertising of Worth's Museum, this city, and taking treatment for an ailment of his eyes, an affliction which caused him to forego his annual travels with the red wagons.

THE FRANK A. ROBBINS NEW SHOWS, with Frank A. Robbins and Geo. A. Hill at the helm, have been doing a splendid business ever since the start, and the performance is being constantly strengthened. Geo. Nash, trick bicycle rider, and Rosina Dubski joined last week. Johnny Purvis and his donkeys amuse every one. The Wild West, led by James Kid and Broncho Bob, is very strong. The parade is better than ever, and everything looks bright, fresh and clean. Clarence Farrell is in the ticket wagon, and Bill Doris handles the privileges. The sideshow is also proving a big winner.

THE following is the roster of Forepaugh's Advertising Car, No 4: Geo. H. Robinson, superintendent; D. R. Kelly, assistant; Frank Riss, F. B. Shallcross, Frank Rhodes, E. C. Knox, Martin Connelly, Joe Miller, Levi Fearless, H. Morman, Geo. B. Buckley, H. A. Leschinsky, J. Moor, A. Strich, J. T. Zelf, Col. Geo. H. Saunders, G. F. Morrison, Mike Hodgeman, Frank Brown and James Thornton.

HUGH COYLE, the industrious and enterprising agent of the Forepaugh Show, writes as follows regarding the successful outcome of his recent fight for the Lake Front property at Chicago, brief mention of which was made last week: "Our Lake Front long drawn out imbroglio culminated in an overwhelming victory for us. Every inch was contested, but when the document, signed by the presidents, secretaries and business managers of all the Chicago papers was flashed into court, the whole gang became baggy at the knees, and we took 'em all into camp at once. The general indorsement of the show by so many prominent people of Chicago in court, fixed the business, and it was really declared a higher honor to own such an institution, for the Adam Forepaugh Show can now have anything it wants in Chicago. Judge Hawes gave the decision modifying the injunction, and authorizing the city to issue a license for the use of the lake front. We had no walk over by any means. They met us full of fight, but we knocked them out. I have been taken seriously ill with symptoms of typhoid fever, and am laid up sick now at the Leland Hotel, with no immediate prospects of getting out, and that makes me feel like a caged lion. As soon as I am able I am going to Kansas City, my old stamping ground."

IT was not the E. O. Rogers Great Pacific Show from Friendship, N. Y., that was recently closed and sold out in the West. The E. O. Rogers' Show is now on the road and doing well.

EDWARD ORRIN arrived at the Orrin Bros.' Amphitheatre, City of Mexico, May 17.

GEORGE W. ORRIN, who is at present enjoying a vacation in the South, will be in this city next week.

THE DE SOTO BROS. have closed with Clark Bros.' Circus Royal and joined Pomeroy & Samuels' Circus.

CHAS. BARTINE'S NEW SHOWS opened their season May 11, at Connersville, Ind., and report prosperous business.

It was the intention to close the season at the end of this week, when the Drury Lane Pantomime Co. should conclude its engagement; but, disastrous circumstances overtaking that company, it was compelled to disband last week, leaving the People's with no engagement. The house will be closed for several months, during which time it will undego a few alterations and improvements. Although the theatre will not be rebuilt this Summer, as was contemplated some time ago, the claim that the People's will be a new theatre before the World's Fair will be made good. THE WORLD OF PLAYERS

— J. J. Showles, Joseph Murphy's popular agent, has gone to his Port Elgin, Ont., retreat for the Summer. He visited Philadelphia and the Virginia Mountains immediately after the close of Mr. Murphy's season, and passed through this city May 18, en route to the Queen's Dominions. Mr. Showles is a landed proprietor at Port Elgin, and the natives—like all others who know the veteran—are very fond of him.

— Joseph Murphy is already enjoying life in the one way that most appeals to him. That is to say, he is trout fishing. The Connecticut brooks have mirrored his honest visage during the past fortnight. In a few days the New Hampshire lakes will know him. It is worth while denying, by the way, that Mr. Murphy is going to Australia on a professional tour next season. His plans, so far as they are arranged to date, were authoritatively stated in THE CLIPPER of several months ago.

— T. E. Mills will have charge of the routing department of the Cortiss Dramatic Exchange, this city.

— The following people joined Keith's Bijou Opera Co. at Philadelphia, last week, for the Summer: May Gerville, J. C. Morse, Florence Bell, Ed. Coles and Elma Wilton.

— George Wilton and Ed. Rue have secured "The Great Metropolis" for next season.

— The Cortiss Dramatic Exchange is organizing an opera company for Fort George, Hariem, to open Decoration Day, May 30.

— John R. Compson's "Karl's Promise" Co. closed a brief season at Buffalo, May 16. The company have returned to town.

— John Gilroy and George D. Mitchell left "The Fakir" Co., and have returned to this city.

— E. F. Albee, general manager of Keith's Theatres, was in the city last week, securing attractions and artists for his various enterprises.

— Louise Hofer has been engaged for Harris' Stock Co. at Pittsburg for the Summer.

— Fisher's "Cold Day" Co. close a long and successful season at Williamsburg, N. Y., May 23.

— T. J. Gray, musical director, has been engaged by Lizzie Daly for her preliminary season of two weeks.

— Lewis Mitchell, of "The Ivy Leaf" Co., recently purchased a fine piece of property at Arlington, N. J., where he will build a home for himself.

— W. S. Harkins is organizing a dramatic company for a provincial tour of several weeks, to commence early next month. E. L. Snader, Lin Hurst, Julia Arthur and Jessie West have been engaged.

— Ethel Greybrooke sails for Europe May 23.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore.—The second week of the promenade concerts at Harris' Academy introduced Marion Weed as soloist May 18, and was marked by a change in the character of music performed by the orchestra, the heavier numbers of last week giving place, to ligh'er and more popular works.

FORD'S OPERA HOUSE.—"Wild Oats," with Creston Clarke and Wilfred Clarke in the cast, was presented to an audience of fair size 18. Elizabeth Carroll Lackey made her first appearance on any stage on this occasion. Gilmore's Band will be heard in four concerts, 25 26, closing the season at this house.

HOLIDAY STREET THEATRE.—"Alone in London" attracted a large audience 18. "Kidnapped" closed a fair week 16. "The Midnight Alarm" 25-30.

HOWARD AUDITORIUM.—The Grau English Opera Co. opened to excellent attendance 18, in "The Bohemian Girl." Business was good 11-16, with "Olivette." "Erminie" will be put on 25. The management announces the early opening of a roof garden, to be constructed on the highest elevation of the building, work on which has already begun. Concerts will be given between acts and at the close of the performances by Warner's Monumental Band of twenty-five pieces.

KERNAN'S MONUMENTAL THEATRE.—Sam T. Jack's Creoles commenced their second engagement 18 before a full house. The "Frank McNish Specialty Co." had a fair week closing 16.

BALTIMORE DIME MUSEUM.—New in curio hall 18: Mlle. Oneida (snake charmer) and Astarte (illusion). In theatorium: Jennie Williams, Johnson and Turner, Jennings and O'Brien, John Ray and Minnie Steele.

ODEON THEATRE.—This well known old place of amusement reopened 18, with E. M. Castine, manager; William Castine, treasurer; Dan Hart, stage manager, and George Nachman, leader of orchestra. On the stage were the the Whippler Twins, Jessie Pickert, Dan Hart, James Goodwin and Mabel Stanley, Eugenia Natowitz, Sam Lang and Dollie Sharp, and Ida Florence.

NOTES.—About forty members of Baltimore Lodge, B. P. O. E., accompanied by a number of ladies, left for Louisville, Ky., on a special car, 16, to attend the annual reunion and meeting of the Grand Lodge. At a special meeting of the Lodge, held 15, Past Exalted Ruler Peter J. Campbell was presented with a handsome diamond studded locket.....Alfred McDowell died at his home, 519 Aisquith Street, 18, aged thirty-eight years. Mr. McDowell had been sick with disease of the spine and a nervous affection for nearly eight months. He became well known in many of the larger cities through his connection with the play of "Muggs' Landing," in which he performed the character of Asa Buck for over 1,000 times. His last engagement was in "The Kindergarten," as the Professor. He was regarded as an expert whist player. He was a member of Utica, N. Y., Lodge of Elks. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock, and the interment will be made at Bonnie Brae.

NEW JERSEY.

Newark.—And now, as we come to the last chapter in the season's history, we find an increase in business, which can be accounted for by the worthy character of the attractions we had last week. Looking back over the year, it appears peculiarly like a seesaw, one week up and the next down, averaging only a fair remuneration for our amusement furnishers. Business in commercial circles has been considerably depressed, which has had its effect in the theatrical line. However, sterling attractions, of which we have had a good many, have, as a rule, been graciously received, and the season can be accounted a successful one generally. At Miner's last week the Byrne Hall Opera Co. closed their regular season to excellent business. This week, Kate Claxton. The house was well filled May 18, and a good week is anticipated. Week of 25, Fanny Davenport will close the house for the season.

JACOBS'.—The honors were divided last week between "Keep It Dark" and "The Broom Maker," each receiving a good share of patronage. This week, "Under the Gaslight" will be the last gleam that will light up the house this season. It will probably shine on good audiences, as the attendance 18 was quite remunerative.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—In the hands of E. T. Stetson and his stock, "The Ticket of Leave Man" was creditably performed last week. This week, "Neck and Neck" will probably meet with success. Next week, a new dramatization of "East Lynne," by Hannie M. Ingham, the leading lady.

WALDMANN'S.—Although we are nearly at the close of the season, the patronage does not seem to fall off to any extent here, as the Henry Burlesque Co. drew good houses week ending 16. Annie Hart and a good company are with us this week, and they should do a profitable business, as the house 18 was flattering. Week of 25, the London Gaiety Girls, which will end the season of the house.

BIJOU.—This week's programme: Alice Williams and May Morgan, Greek George, Max Luttberg, Capt. John Graham, Harry Williams and Annie West, Prof. Davis and Chas. Heywood.

GLOBE.—This week: Georgie Leonard, Florence Reed, Tony Harris, Emma Gracie, Annie Reed and J. W. Dunn.

GAIETY.—Mr. and Mrs. Lowinsky stay another week. New people: Andy Lewis, Miss Lee, Miss Carroll, Miss Aroons, James Telfel and John Reilly.

CASINO.—This week: Annie Milton, Gertie Miller, May Sullivan, Kittie Peters and Fred Baker.

NOTES.—Col. Morton invited the letter carriers to Miner's Theatre 18.....Fred D. Ellis, formerly advance agent for Lester & Allen's Co., sued Wm. Lester and R. H. Brock in the First District Court, 16, for salary due him. While the company were playing at Waldmann's, last month, Mr. Ellis got out an attachment on the box receipts for $74.12, the amount due him. Mr. Ellis said that he billed the company at Hoboken for a week, but they played only one night. The balance of the bill was for expenses. The defence claimed that after the fiasco at Hoboken, the company reorganized and Mr. Ellis promised to call the old debts "off." The jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff in the full amount..... Linus, the horse with the cream colored mane and tail, is here on exhibition for a week or two, doing a medium business.....The Henry Burlesque Co. wind up their season at Philadelphia this week. The company will be strengthened by Jimmy Larkins and Jimmy Hagen..... Joe Seder, resident manage of H. R. Jacobs' Theatre, will receive a benefit about June 1.

Hoboken.—The season at H. R. Jacobs' Theatre closed May 16. Manager Jacobs will next season present a line of attractions that should bring increasing patronage. The Sunday closing has been beneficial in one way. It stopped the hords of political dead heads who occupied good seats to the exclusion of the paying public.

CROMHEIM'S THEATRE.—Week of May 18: Harry Woodson and Laura Bennett, Emil Mueller, Alice Thompson, Frank Davis, Lizzie Gerome, John Devoy, Minnie Watson, Max Pettingill, Reta Gough, J. H. Perry and Ella Fay. Business is light.

NOTES.—The man with the barrel not forthcoming at the critical moment, W. S. Moore's Imperial Opera Co. has been disbanded and the members have retired to the bosom of their several families. All dates have been canceled..... Machinist F. W. Mohn, who has been connected with Jacobs' Theatre since the laying of the first brick, and who by his efficiency and attention to duties has added much to the success of the house, will next season have charge of the stage at Jacobs' Academy of Music, Newark, N. J.....Scenic Artists Mohn and Becker have the contract for Carroll Johnston's new venture, and the work for Aug. Neuville's "The Boy Tramp."..... The stockholders of the Palisade Amusement Co. held a meeting 16, and took the necessary steps to raise $25,000 on bonds and mortgages.

Jersey City.—Webber's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" opened to a crowded house at the Academy May 18. May 25, Susie Howard in "Nell, the Waif;" 27-30, "U and I." "The Two Orphans" fared well last week.

OPERA HOUSE.—The management have decided to open June 23, instead of 15, as the theatre proper is far from completion. The High School commencement will inaugurate the opening 24, 25.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—This house was packed to the doors to see Flynn's London Gaiety Girls 18. The advance in price did not deter the crowd from forcing their way in. Next week, "Muldoon's Picnic." Business last week was large.

NOTES.—John Hammond and Harry Martell will summer in the Catskills..... The Academy has been secured for Hager's Allegory June 4-6.....Advertising Agent John (Rocky) Moore has taken unto himself a wife..... Rice's Circus did not materialize May 15, although Bill Foster O'Meila was notified that he would receive the paper as soon as the boards used by Barnum were stripped. .....Leader Wagner, of the Academy, introduced a new medley, "Mixed Pickles, No. 2," 18..... H. S. Taylor, of your city, will do the booking for the Opera House..... The season at the Academy closes week of 25.

WISCONSIN.

Milwaukee.—This week witnesses the closing of the season at the Davidson, Effie Ellsler being the last attraction, May 17-20. During the Summer some alterations will be made. The balcony and gallery will be remodeled, while the hotel is being rapidly pushed towards completion. The second season will be inaugurated the last week in August.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—"Bluebeard Jr." comes 17-20. Chas. A. Gardner closing the season 30, 31.

BIJOU.—Thearle's "U. T. C.," including the Hyers Sisters, this week. "A Dark Secret" closed 16 to good attendance. "Eagle's Nest" week of 24.

STANDARD.—Nothing is announced.

SLENSBY'S NEW ALCAZAR has undergone a complete change during the last few weeks, and is now a neat theatre. Instead of the clumsy music stand, a neat stage, with tasty scenery, has been added, large enough for combinations to play, which Mr. Slensby will do during the coming season. A new feature is the gallery, the seats of which are so arranged as to keep the stage in plain view in any part. The lower floor, which at present is supplied with chairs and tables, will be raised and regular opera chairs put in, during the Summer. Heretofore no admission fee has been charged, but the price is now ten cents. New faces 18: Bobby Mack, Allyn and Lingard, Gertie Holden, Belle Livingston, Clara Wallace and May Hornby.

SCHLITZ'S PARK.—This resort will be opened June 15 for a Summer season of light opera. THE NEW YORK STAGE.

During the Summer of 1888, Theo. Moss (who had regained possession of the house) made extensive alterations by J. B. McElfatrick & Co. The entire lower flooring was removed, and a new one substituted; a change in the placing of the balcony girders raised that to a height of fifteen feet above the lever of the orchestra floor—a gain of seven feet over the old place. The upper gallery was also raised and extended over the balcony. All the steps between the street and the auditorium disappeared, and a perfectly level entrance exists to the orchestra chairs. Four feet of space were taken from the front of the stage without any curtailment of the actual working room, and two rows of chairs gained in consequence. Two of the lower boxes were dispensed with.

The opening attraction was Johnson & Slavin's Minstrels, on Aug. 27. Robert Downing, with his dramatic company, followed. He played Spartacus Sept. 3, 4 and 8, Virginius matinee of 5 and evening of 7, and "Ingomar" 6 and matinee of 8. "The Paymaster" was produced 17, for two weeks. "Evangeline" came March 11 for two weeks, followed by M. Coquelin for one week, commencing 25, in "Le Mariage de Figaro;" 26, "Le Juif Polonais;" matinee 27, "Le Mariage de Figaro;" evening, "Les Surprises du Divorce;" 28, "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon" and monologues; Matinee 30, "Le Juif Polonais;" evening, farewell night, "Le Gendre de M. Poirier." On the occasion of Coquelin's benefit 29, M. Lomon's five act romantic play, "Jean Dacier," and a little comedy called "The Silent System" were originally seen in this country. In the former Coquelin impersonated the soldier hero, already made familiar to a certain proportion of our theatre goers in the Gaston Cadal of Frederick Warde. The cast of the first piece was:

Jean Dacier	M. Coquelin	De Puylaurens	M. Mayer
Berthaut	M. Duquesne	Antonia	Mme. Kerwich
Baudru	M. Jean Coquelin	La Comtesse	Mme. Patry.
Le Comte	M. Abel

In "The Silent System" Coquelin acted wholly in pantomime the part of a henpecked husband who didn't even get a chance to utter a word of reply.

Then an accident stopped the performance. A mantel piece, with its load of vases and a clock, fell away from the wall, almost struck the actress, and littered the stage. She stood uncertain whether to proceed. M. Coquelin quitted the scene, and the curtain was dropped.

It was exactly midnight when the play was resumed. Its spell of loquacity by the wife ended when, at length, he managed to show to her a bracelet that he had bought as a birthday gift.

Mrs. Agnes Booth was the wife in this charming little play, and her acting was rewarded by the hearty applause of a large house. The bracelet was a genuine gift, for it bore the inscription: "C. Coquelin—Agnes Booth, 'The Silent System,' March 29." It was a graceful and thoughtful tribute from a French actor to one of our most admired actresses. Up to this point he had not spoken a word; but he then advanced with Mrs. Booth to the footlights and made a speech in surprisingly correct and fluent English, his thanks to Mrs. Booth and his gratitude to New York playgoers for their sympathy and their support. Then, while his friends and admirers grouped themselves about him on the stage, young Peter Barlow pressed forward at length, and, in French, told the comedian that his personal admirers had selected the occasion to present to him a token of their regard, and then handed him a bulging bag of ornamented buffalo skin, bound with throngs of embossed leather. The actor loosened the thongs, and the leather fell away and revealed a large egg shaped loving cup of silver. It had three handles, modeled to represent buffalo horns. On the sides of the bowl are three scenes from Indian life in enamel, after designs by Catlin. The interior is lined with gold, etched with American emblems. The cup was designed by Tiffany. The salver that goes with it was also inlaid in niello, and was engraved:

A. COQUELIN,
Ses Amis
a New York,
29 Mars, 1889.

M. Coquelin's first American tour closed night of 30, with a revival of "Le Gendre de M. Poirier." After the curtain had fallen upon the last act, and had been raised twice in answer to loud cheers, the leading comedian finally came forward, and said, in French:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—In a few seconds this curtain will separate us, I am sorry to say, for a long time. During this last week I have had the honor of playing before you, first as Figaro, in the master comedy of the last century, and tonight as Mons. Poirier, in one of the best comedies of our own times. Upon other nights I have been seen in "Les Surprise du Divorce," an amusing trifle, and in "Le Voyage de Perrichon," in "Le Juif Polonais," an impassive, if painful, picture, and in "Jean Dacier," a tale of heroic self abnegation. You will believe me when I say that the sentiments I have had to utter have not always been my own. I have no ambition to live between two mothers in law. I am afraid that heroic self sacrifice is not for me, and I am sure that no terrible crime weighs upon my conscience, but I am also sure that, unlike Mr. Perrichon, I am capable of understanding gratitude. My stay in this country, and particularly in this city, has been so fraught with satisfaction that I cannot say good bye without expressing, with my sincere thanks to you, the hope that I may return to again win your kindly appreciation.

Edwin French took a benefit Sunday evening, 31.

Rose Coghlan commenced a two weeks' engagement April 1, in "Jocelyn," a play by her brother, Chas. Coghlan, produced for the first time in New York. The cast: Louis XIII, Chas. F. Gotthold; Prince Saviani, Wilton Lackaye; Philip De Boissac, Frank Lander; Charles De Boissac, Conway Carpenter; Henry De Boissac, Albert Roberts; Gaston Marcel, James E. Wilson; Agenor, Harry Gwynette; Marfiso, Charles W. Morgan; Volatil, Albert Roberts; Narcisse, Charles E. Edwin; Captain, William Ranous; Lieutenant, Frank Batten; A Physician, Chas. Evans; Michael, E. Tom Webber; Blaisois, Verner Clarges; Boy, Birdie Black; Mme. De Mortaigne, Mrs. Charles Watson; Georgette, Viola Black; Jocelyn, Rose Coghlan. It was originally produced Oct. 1, 1888, at Newark, N. J. Mrs. Chas. Watson died in this city, May 4, 1889.

Miss Coghlan played for two weeks, to very large business, and was followed 15 by Robson and Crane, for four weeks, in "The Henrietta." The cast:

Nicholas Vanalstyne	W. H. Crane
Dr. Park Wainwright	Frank Losee
Nicholas Vanalstyne Jr.	Charles Kent

Musgrave	L. Carrenter
Mrs. Cornelia Opdyke	Ellie Wilton

Robson and Crane terminated their engagement May 11, and it was the closing of their partnership as joint stars. They had been together for twelve years. Ullie Akerstrom, a Western star, made her metropolitan debut 13, acting "Annette the Dancing Girl." The cast was:

Pete	Frank Hewitt	Mrs. Weldon	Maggie Harold
Richard	James Homer	Madge	Hattie Morris
Cuban Guard	T. H. Tolway	Annette	Ullie Akerstrom
Sanford Weldon			Alfred Hudson
Herbert Ashton			Frank Lander
Dandy Dick			J. K. Applebee Jr.
Florence Markley			Jennie Nichols

A benefit performance in aid of the Lovis Downtown Sabbath and Daily School occurred afternoon 14.

The season of 1889-90 opened Sept. 9 with Theo. Moss as proprietor and manager; Chas. Burnham, business manager. Many alterations were made in the house during the Summer, the entire orchestra floor reconstructed. The circle, which was added to this part of the auditorium last reason, was removed, and the ground floor given up wholly to orchestra chairs. The boxes were rearranged. The lower proscenium boxes were extended toward the auditorium, giving more room than they formerly gave. The iron fronts of the balcony, which had remained since the old days of Wallack's, were removed, and in their place was constructed fronts of papier mache and woodwork. The lobby was redecorated and recarpeted, and the interior decorations touched up, so that the auditorium looked as fresh and attractive as though the theatre had been just built. The old stage of the theatre was removed and a new one constructed. It is a "section stage," with all modern improvements, and can be used for any kind of entertainment from a pantomime or spectacle to a tragedy.

— Editor A. E. Hyre, who publishes a weekly paper called The Cuyahogan, at Brooklyn Village, a suburb of Cleveland, O., was horsewhipped by Daisy Beverly, near his office, afternoon of May 12. Miss Beverly has had histrionic ambitions, and Hyre has held her up to pretty severe ridicule in his paper. He visited Cleveland 11, and on his return found Miss Beverly and her father waiting for him near his office. Miss Beverly struck him several times over the head with a snake whip, before he succeeded in imprisoning her hands, when her father knocked him down and held him while his daughter continued to whip him. A crowd then gathered and took the girl away. Miss Beverly starred recently in "The Silver Bird."

— The Pasadena, Cal., Opera House was sold May 1, by the company who owned it, to Prof. T. S. C. Lowe, president of the Citizens' Bank in that city, and also of the Pasadena Gas Co. It will be transformed into a factory for the making of gas fixtures. It is a very pretty theatre, but has never paid since its opening.

— W. R. Hayden, Stuart Robson's manager, has leased his country seat at the Atlantic Highlands for the Summer. Mr. Hayden will go to Europe in June.

THE WORLD OF PLAYERS

Anticipation—Aug. 24, 1890.

"We're off for Rochester!" he cried in glee;
"The season's opened;" and his heart was light
With pleasant thoughts, for he could plainly see
Six hundred saved for Summer. Ah, how bright
The prospect that by seashore's glitt'ring spray,
After the close in flannels he'd disport away
'Midst Long Branch belles—just while twelve weeks
In pleasure, e'en without a single thought
Of Engel's or hot pavements of Broadway,
Which he had paced last Summer up and down
Until his feet were blistered; and e'en Bowery Bay
Elysium seemed, compared to Gotham town.
"No more," he cried, with resolution strong,
"Will festive poker take my hard earned cash;
No more will merry dice lure me along
To blow myself. I will not even mash.
For mashing's oft expensive; and I'll keep
Expenses down, so I may make a flash
Upon the boys next Summer, 'till they weep
With envy, while I cut a splendid dash."

REALIZATION—May 9, 1891.

The last week's done. See, his dejected mien
Proves that good fellowship's not always best.
His thoughts are now—"what might have been."
Another season gone just like the rest—(Broke).

W. H. GUNNING.

Solomon, the composer, who was to have led the orchestra, left for Philadelphia to accept a Summer engagement with the Pauline Hall Opera Co. It is understood that Mr. Haddon proposed to prefer, or already has preferred, charges against Newark Lodge for electing Mr. Sullivan, and that he stigmatizes Mr. Sullivan as being unfit to be an Elk. The Five A's Annual.

The annual entertainment provided by the Actors' Amateur Athletic Association of America, popularly known as the Five A's, has become one of the regular amusement institutions of the metropolis. The members of the club since its institution have given a show once a year, and it is handled in a thorough business like manner, while the programmes offered have never failed to draw crowded houses. As a rule the performers, with the exception of the ladies who take part, are members of the club, and of course volunteer their services cheerfully. They provide a big quantity of diversion, and give the public the full worth of its money. The amusement committee announce the annual entertainment for this season to take place at the Metropolitan Opera House, this city, Thursday afternoon, May 28. A programme is being arranged, which will consist of a number of novel and original skits and sketches, in addition to acts from the reigning comic opera successes. The boys expect to outdo all previous efforts. One radical departure will be made in regard to the selling of flowers. Boutonnieres for the gentlemen and corsage bouquets for ladies will be given away as souvenirs. And, what's more, they will be dispensed by a bevy of charming footlight favorites. This is an innovation that will certainly meet with the appreciation of all. Among the novelties of the performance will be a burlesque on "B ue Jeans," and a burlesque ballet divertissement, entitled "Flags of All Nations," in which some of the leading comedians in the profession will take part. The entertainment will close with a burlesque circus. Tickets can be procured at the club house, 43 West Twenty-eighth Street.

VARIETY AND MINSTRELSY.

"Where Do You Go From Here?"

Of course I'm not new in the business,
Though sometimes I may appear fresh.
That an agent is prone to take liberties,
Is a fact well known to the profesh.
I've heard all the gags in creation,
I've told chestnuts without the least fear,
But there's one that invariably greets me:
"Where do you go from here."

At the depot the ticket man asks me,
And the same from the clerk at the hotel.
Then the fellow who hauls up the baggage
'Till I answer: "I'm going to Sheol!"
Then some actress who has mislaid her memory
Cries: "A moment, Mr. Agent, your ear;
Excuse me, but won't you inform me,
Where do you go from here?"

You repair to the barroom to avoid it,
And, as usual, with the gay rolling dice,
Try fate with the quite lucky barman,
Take a little plain soda and ice.
After several much stronger decoctions,
Intermingled with whiskey and beer,
You think you've become quite oblivious
To that "Where do you go from here?"

At supper you're mashing the waitress,
Give her a couple of passess or so;
With the nerve of the ne'er failing agent,
You're ahead of the very best show.
She is yours in an instant, you know it!
You could worship this hotel dear.
'Til she asks in an innocent manner:
"Where do you go from here?"

'Tis then you awake from your stupor,
Regretting and cursing your fate;
Then you load up with more gin and soda,
Stay up 'til the hour is quite late.
With a jag on the streets you are howling,
'Til a copper does quickly appear,
And asks, in a voice of condolence:
"Where do you go from here?"

To jail, Mr. Cop, if you'll take me,
My poor brain is longing for peace,
I'm not drunk, so do not forsake me,
Lock me up, won't you, Mister Police?
I've a sure case, I know, of paresis;
My brain has become sort of queer,
And it's all from being an agent,
And that "Where do you go from here?"

CHAS. H. STANLEY.

THE NELSONS' GREAT WORLD CO. closed its sixth annual tour at Indianapolis, Ind., May 9. The season is reported to have been the most successful in the history of this organization. The Nelson Family will Summer at Mount Clemens, Mich. Harrie R. Pierce will again manage the company on tour next season. He will also Summer at Mount Clemens.

THE MRS. GEN. TOM THUMB LILIPUTIAN CO. closed a long season of seventy weeks at Philadelphia May 23. The company is composed of Count and Baron Magri, Geo. F. and Minnie Kaine, Lillie Kaine, Agnes Halleck, Ava Morice, Ala Zada, Com. Middleton, with performing ponies, and Ogawas' Japanese Troupe. Wm. J. Maxwell is the manager, and R. B. Marsh the business manager. The next season will open the latter part of August, with several new features. Their route will include the largest Southern cities, and a tour of the Pacific coast.

NELSONIA, who is traveling with the Silbon Co. in South America, writes the following interesting letter from La Paz, Bolivia: "The Silbon Troupe were not content with being caught in the revolution in the Argentine Republic, but jumped right into another one in Chili. The company, however, very fortunately, escaped any great financial losses. From Chili we went to Mollendo, which is the first Peruvian port, and took the train for Arequipa, which is 7,000ft. high, and full of ruins from a recent earthquake. The theatre had no roof, but we covered it with our canvas top, and played to good business for a week. From there we proceeded to Puno, Peru, an ancient settlement inhabited mostly by Inca Indians. The town is built on a high bluff, bordering on Lake Titicaca, 12,800ft. above the level of the sea, and said to be the highest body of water in the world. We gave five performances to good business. From Puno we took steamer across the lake, 150 miles and one day's sail. On the trip we saw the Andes in all their glory, including the gigantic, snow covered peaks of Mt. Misti and Sorata towering 'way above the clouds. The latter is the highest peak in the Western Hemisphere and second only to Mt. Everest. Arriving at Chililaya, Bolivia, we proceeded by coaches to La Paz, a typical Spanish city, half the inhabitants being of the Inca race of Indians, who still conform to their ancient mode of dressing and speak their own language. Our business at La Paz has been simply grand, at good prices, and, although we have been here two weeks, we can easily stay two more. Mt. Illimani looks only a stone's throw away, yet it is more than forty miles distant. The climate is rather chilly, and the air, naturally rare, effects strangers very much while walking, and much more while doing gymnastic work. In Puno, cats and dogs cannot live, but, fortunately for me, our stay was brief, otherwise I should probably have lost my troupe of dogs. Even at La Paz they cannot live many months, and one rarely sees such animals. I can safely say that I have performed my juggling and my troupe of dogs at a greater altitude than such performances ever before given. This may seem a sweeping assertion to make, but I have ascertained from the reliable authorities that there have been but three other companies of this nature in this section, viz., Chiarini, Dockrill and the Livingstons, and neither company had juggling or dogs. From La Paz we will retrace our steps back to Mollendo, thence by steamer to Lima and up the coast. At present everybody is in excellent health, but a couple of months ago, at Santiago, Chili, I had the smallpox, which incapacitated me from working for several weeks. The 'Old Reliable' shows up quite regularly, and, though rather old when we get it, of course, it is welcomed heartily and its contents devoured eagerly, not a morsel of news being left untouched."

MANAGER GUS HILL denies the statement recently made to THE CLIPPER by A. W. Handy, who asserted that he was Mr. Hill's assistant manager. Mr. Hill adds: "I am sole proprietor and manager of my company, and I have had no assistant whatsoever. Mr. Handy was my property man."

WINIFRED JOHNSON is to make an extended European tour. Flattering inducements were offered, which were finally accepted, and her appearance on the other side will no doubt be well received. She has a pleasing stage presence, and is an artist in her line.

THE SHACKLEFORD LECTURE AND CONCERT CO. opened their season at Tottenville, S. I., May 16. The roster: Jno. M. Shackleford, proprietor and manager; J. Archie McGovern, business manager; Col. H. K. Shackleford, lecturer; Mlle. Lyla Shackleford, Etta Shackleford, M. Emory, T. S. Start, Ralph Moya, Lester and Barton, and Prof. C. F. Karwotski.

EUNICE MARCELOT has recovered from her recent illness, and has resumed work with her husband, James J. Morton, at the Theatre Comique, Kansas City.

THE SISTERS LEYTON will return to London next month.

THE HENRY BURLESQUE CO. will close their season May 23, at the Central Theatre, Philadelphia, their third engagement there this season. The company report a prosperous tour of forty-one weeks. Their next tour will open early in August in this city, and is booked for forty-five weeks.

HARRY M. SCOTT closed his engagement at the Star Theatre, Cleveland, O., May 16, and left 17 for Chicago.

TWO NEW THEATRES.

Assemblyman Mullone's New Opera House at Jersey City.

Assemblyman Mullone's new theatre, now in course of erection on the South side of Newark Avenue, about a hundred feet above the City Hall, Jersey City, will be one of the coolest and prettiest theatres in the State. The location is the best in the city, the new house being in the centre of the most prominent business block, and only five blocks from the Pennsylvania ferries to New York. Nearly all the street cars pass the door. The building was to have been completed by the first of March, but the bad weather that prevailed so delayed the work that it will not be finished until about the middle of June, too late to open for this season. The seating capacity will be about 1,500. All the chairs in the orchestra and in the three front rows of the balcony will be handsomely upholstered in dark blue plush, and will have steel spring seats and coat and hat racks. The rest of the seats in the balcony will be evenly divided between upholstered leather chairs and perforated veneered chairs. Benches will be placed in the gallery. There will be four boxes on each side, two upper and two lower, handsomely upholstered in plush. The interior of the theatre will be bright and cheerful. The house will be heated by steam with the latest and most improved apparatus. Handsome combination gas and electric light fixtures will be placed in the theatre, so that either light can be used. The main, or dome chandelier, will contain forty gas and forty electric lights, and will be a handsome and elaborate piece of artistic workmanship. The electric lights will be controlled by resistance regulators from the stage, so that they can be dimmed in any part of the house. Two wide stairways lead from the orchestra floor to the balcony, and there is an extra exit stairway from the gallery to the balcony, to be used only in case of fire. The vestibule will be 26ft. long by 16ft. in depth and 18ft. in height. There are three 6ft. double doors leading from the orchestra into the lobby, and two 10ft. double doors leading from the lobby to the street. The balcony stairways empty almost directly into the lobby, which will be tiled, with the words, "Opera House" in the centre. There will be no steps from the orchestra into the lobby, the lobby floor being level with the orchestra floor at the wall separating the auditorium from the lobby, but there will be four steps from the lobby to the sidewalk. The gallery entrance is on the west side of the building. The box office will adjoin the gallery entrance, while the manager's office will be on the other side of the lobby. Part of the latter office will be used as a checkroom. There will be a handsome ladies' parlor on the balcony floor. There will be two 4-inch water pipes on the stage, one in the orchestra, one in the balcony and one in the gallery. Fire hose will be attached to these pipes, and with the large supply of water the auditorium and stage could be flooded in a few minutes in case of fire. In order to guard against every emergency and make the theatre absolutely safe, Mr. Mullone has purchased St. John's Hall, in the rear of the theatre, fronting on Gregory Street, and there will be two exits from the stage into that street. There will also be an entrance to the stage behind each of the lower boxes. The stage is 47ft. 6in. wide, 30ft. deep, and 65ft. high. A portion of the first floor of St. John's Hall will be used for extra dressing rooms and for the storage of properties and scenery. The stage entrance will be through St. John's Hall. The theatre will be ventilated mainly through the roof, but there are several ventilators in each of the side walls. There is no cafe or saloon attached to the theatre, and the only building communicating with the house is St. John's Hall. The new building will be devoted exclusively to theatrical business. It was Mr. Mullone's original intention to have a cafe in the lobby, but, finding that it would encroach upon the entrance and lessen the means of exit, he cut it entirely out. The theatre will be devoted to legitimate drama, and none but the best attractions and most prominent stars in the profession will be engaged by the management. The new theatre will be opened early in September. Including the ground, the theatre will cost over ninety thousand dollars. The ground and building belong to the Klein estate. Mr. Mullone holds a twenty year lease on the building. The plans were prepared by Messrs. McElfatrick & Sons.

Hagan's Opera House.

Below we give a description of the Hagan Opera House, St. Louis, Mo., which will make a bid for the theatrical patronage of that wide awake Western city: The building, which will be of pressed brick, with stone facings and trimmings, will be five stories in height, the Pine Street side being the business side, while the Tenth Street side will be the main face of the theatre. On the corner is a 150ft. tower, which will carry an immense clock. The entrance on Tenth and Pine Streets will be 23ft. long, 40ft. deep and 40ft. high, covered with a glass dome. The floor will be laid in Mosaic tiling. Ascending to the balcony will be two staircases of solid marble, uniting on a platform half way up, and continuing in one. To the left, as one enters from Pine Street, will be the box office. Everything in the auditorium is to be of the finest workmanship and material. The house will be frescoed from top to bottom, and from front to back, while the illumination will be by 1,000 incandescent lamps, with foot and border lights in red, green and white. The seats will be so far apart that no person already seated need be disturbed by people coming in late or by others being called out. They can pass without others rising, without tramping all over somebody's feet and without ruining dresses. The seats will be of the most modern pattern, roomy in width as well as in space between the rows. The boxes will be fourteen in number, two grand boxes and one large box on either side on the parquet and balcony floors, and one large box on either side on the third floor, spanning these three. The boxes will be of the prettiest and most delicate description. In addition to the boxes there will be theatre sofas placed in different sections of the theatre, accommodating two people. The plans provide for the convenience of ladies on both the first and second floors, a ladies' reception room, an inner room and a toilet room, with stationary wash stands, hot and cold water, and attendants. These will be back of the dress circle. There will also be a gentlemen's smoking and lounging room. On the Tenth Street side, to the south of the lobby and opening into it, will be a luxurious manager's office. Back of it will be apartments for employes. In the room set apart for them, each usher will have his own locker. Another important feature is the number and character of the exits, of which there will be twenty-two on the first floor alone, giving 8ft. of exit room. This whole space can be instantly thrown open by the pressure of an electric button, of which there will be four, placed in different locations. In addition, there will be two fire escapes. Electricity will be used to a considerable extent. The scenes will be lowered and raised by electric power. For ventilation, electric fans will be used to force air through pipes.

NEW YORK CITY.

Last Week Reviewed.—An effort to dramatize Rudyard Kipling was the noteworthy event in last week's metropolitan theatricals. At DALY'S, Wednesday night, May 13, a one act play made by Courtenay Thorpe from Mr. Kipling's long story, "The Light That Failed," was performed for the first time on any stage. It was attentively followed by a good sized and very kindly audience. This was its cast: Dick, Courtenay Thorpe; Torpenhow, Charles J. Bell; Bessie, Eleanor Lane; Maisie, Emily Bancker. Mr. Thorpe is an ambitious and hard working young actor, who now and then gains merited credit for clever and original impersonations; but he was clearly overweighted by the role of Dick. Miss Bancker's Maisie was a capital performance in all ways. The play is sketchy and rather feeble, retaining few of the story's excellences. With the close of the week, 16, Rosina Vokes' Spring season at Daly's, and her own season as well, came to an end.....The first week of the McCaull Opera Co.'s Summer engagement at PALMER'S was marked by large audiences, and the new opera, "The Tar and the Tartar," may safely be said to have gained a valuable popular success. .....The AMBERG reopened night of 16 for a single performance of "Gasparone" by the Amberg Opera Co. The receipts went to Manager Amberg, and the occasion was nominally a benefit to him..... Mme. Evelina Roberti made an excellent impression evening of 11, before a large audience at HARDMAN HALL, at her first concert in this city. Mme. Roberti is a French Canadian by birth, but obtained her musical education at Paris. She has a full soprano voice of wide compass. Mme. Roberti was well supported, both instrumentally and vocally. No comment is needed with such names on the programme as Sig. Del Puente, Harry Pepper, Alice Howe and Nahan Franko.....The dark theatres were: NIBLO'S, the ACADEMY, LYCEUM, HARLEM OLYMPIC, METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE and the EIGHTH STREET.....At the THALIA and the ROUMANIA OPERA HOUSE, Hebrew plays continued..... Variety held sway at TONY PASTOR'S, MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE and BOWERY, and the LONDON.....These were the unchanged bills up to 16; "Wang" at the BROADWAY, "O'Dowd's Neighbors" at the BIJOU, "A Straight Tip" at the NEW PARK, "The Envoy" at the STAR, "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows" at PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET, "The Millionaire" at the STANDARD, "All the Comforts of Home" at HERRMANN'S, "The Merchant" at the MADISON SQUARE, "Reilly and the 400" at HARRIGAN'S, "The Henrietta" at the UNION SQUARE and "Apollo" at the CASINO. "O'Dowd's Neighbors" closed its fortnight at the Bijou 16. Millie Price Dow was in the cast 11-16, as a special engagement. "A Straight Tip" departed from the Park 16, having held the boards there with undoubted success since Jan. 26. "The Envoy" was withdrawn by James O'Neill at the Star May 16, after two weeks' performances. It had been a failure. "All the Comforts of Home," in which Charles Frohman's Co. had appeared at Herrmann's since Feb. 19, was taken off May 16. Herrmann's will probably remain dark until early Fall, when "The Solicitor" will be done by Charles Frohman. "The Millionaire" ended its fortnight at the Standard 16. In "The Henrietta" a little change was introduced night of 15, which was a decided improvement. The death scene of young Vanalstyne at the close of the third act was made more effective by leaving the stage entirely to the dying man. Alone in the room, he fell lifeless to the floor; the ticker ticked out the fatal quotations for a full minute as a requiem, and then the curtain dropped. The idea was as novel as it was dramatic. The scene is played in this manner at London. Night of 13 Gertrude Conkling, a debutante, essayed the role of Lady Mary. J. G. Saville is a recent acquisition to the cast of "The Henrietta." .....The week stands finished 16 were these: Lydia Thompson's "Dazzler" Co. at the GRAND OPERA HOUSE, Jane Coombs' "Bleak House" Co. at the PEOPLE'S, Mathews & Smyth's "Burglar" Co. at H. R. JACOBS', C. A. Haswin's "Little Lord Fauntleroy" Co. at the WINDSOR, "The Boy Tramp" at the HARLEM THEATRE, Frank Mayo's Co. at the HARLEM OPERA HOUSE, Hoyt & Thomas' "A Midnight Bell" Co. at the COLUMBUS and C. E. Rice's "McCarthy's Mishaps" Co. at the FOURTEENTH STREET. The season at the Harlem Opera House closed 16.....Richard Mansfield's second week at the GARDEN was divided between revivals of "A Parisian Romance" and "Prince Karl," good sized audiences greeting both plays.

A PECULIAR PROBLEM is puzzling the legal experts of Herrmann's Theatre. Some months ago Mr. Herrmann made plans for building a new theatre at Brooklyn, which was never finished, but the magician became the owner of a quantity of scenery belonging to the old theatre, that stood on the ground secured for the new one. This scenery was stored in a loft in Twenty-ninth Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues. When it was painted it cost about $600, but the storage was so expensive that Mr. Herrmann was anxious to get rid of it at almost any price. A few days ago a man who said he was building a theatre at Coney Island came to W. H. Morton, the manager of Herrmann's Theatre, and wished to see the scenery. He then agreed to pay $75 for it, and paid $50 on account. As soon as he could he got a truck and went to get the scenery, only to learn that since he had paid his money the property had all been burned by a fire caused by a cigarette. The Coney Island man hurried back to Mr. Morton and demanded his $50, but the manager said: "No; the scenery was all right when I sold it to you; I did not offer to insure it for you, and it is not my fault if it has burned since then." The point is this: If Mr. Morton does not owe the buyer the $50, then the buyer must owe Mr. Morton the remaining $25 of the original agreement, and the question is which of the two men justly owes money to the other, and whether he ought to be expected to pay it.

THE SUIT of Mrs. Ettie Henderson and Mrs. Mary Estvan to restrain Nadage Doree from producing the play, "Natasqua," was tried before Judge Patterson, in the Supreme Court, Special Term, May 15. The plaintiffs allege that they dramatized the play "Germain" from a French story, and that in 1887 Miss Doree called on Mrs. Henderson to get a play. Mrs. Henderson sent her to Mrs. Estvan, and finally a contract was signed by which Miss Doree was to produce "Germain" within a certain time. Not long afterward Miss Doree, it is charged, produced the play "Natasqua," which, except as to name, was identical with "Germain." Miss Doree alleged on the stand that the plaintiffs took their play from hers, and on cross examination explained signing the contract by saying that Mrs. Henderson had told her that her husband, the late William Henderson, would not produce the play unless he thought his wife wrote it. The testimony of Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Estvan was very strong against the pretentions of Miss Doree, and Mrs. Charles A. Doremus testified that she knew that Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Estvan wrote the play. Decision was reserved.

SUE CHUNG CHEW, who was formerly the manager of the Chinese Theatre, at No. 19 Bowery, appeared at the Tombs Police Court, May 15, in response to a summons that had been granted on the complaint of Wow Wow, a leading Chinese actor, who accused him of having appropriated $160 to his own use. The case was dismissed.

A BENEFIT in aid of the Washington Arch Fund was given at the Madison Square Theatre, Tuesday afternoon, May 19. Joseph Jefferson, W. J. Florence, Viola Allen, Fred'k Paulding, Geo. Denham, Eloise Lombard and others gave an act of "The Rivals." Amateurs supplied the remaining features of the programme.

THE CASINO'S roof garden opened for the Summer May 18. Erdelyi Naczi's Hungarian Band have been engaged for the season.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE THEATRE.—June 13 will wind up a season of successful business, and this house will then be dark until the middle of August. Manager Louis Robie has catered well to the wants of Miner & Canary's patrons, and to his untiring efforts in securing the best attractions is due the major portion of the success attained. The house will probably undergo a much needed renovation in the way of a general brightening up during the period of idleness. For this week Turner's English Girls Co. are the attraction. The Horseshoe Four and Farmer Burns (who will wrestle all comers) are included in the company. Next week, Rose Hill's Co.

TREASURER ED. J. RICE, of the Standard, benefited at that house Sunday night, May 17. The theatre was well filled. R. F. Carroll, J. B. Radcliffe, Gus Williams, Eloise Mortimer, May Yohe, Flora Moore, Delia Stacey, Haines and Vidocq, John T. Kelly, Tom Casey and others volunteered.

THE annual benefit of United Council, No. 1,035, A. L. H., was held at the Star Sunday evening, May 17, and netted nearly $2,000. The volunteers were Jeffreys Lewis, Milly Kent, Grace Golden, Annie Meyers, Hubert Wilke, Digby Bell, De Wolf Hopper, Bertha Ricci, Helen Bertram and others. Jeannette St. Henry and Edmund Stanley disappointed.

NELLA R. GOODWIN, the wife of N. C. Goodwin Jr., is suing her husband for a limited divorce, and the case came up May 15 before Judge Lawrence in the Supreme Court, Chambers, upon a motion for alimony and counsel fees. Mrs. Goodwin, who was Mrs. Nella R. Baker, of Buffalo, was married to N. C. Goodwin Jr. on Oct. 21, 1888. They went to live at No. 226 West End Avenue, in a house for which Mr. Goodwin paid $30,000. On Sept. 29 last, while driving in Central Park, Mrs. Goodwin was thrown from her carriage and severely injured. These injuries brought on a nervous trouble, and she went to a sanitarium at Brooklyn, after the physicians had failed to cure her at her home. She went to the sanitarium twice, and on April 3 last she was declared permanently cured. She sent word to her husband, she alleges in affidavits, telling him that she was cured, and asking him to come and take her away. Then, much to her surprise, she learned from Mr. Goodwin that he had deserted the house in West End Avenue, and had taken apartments at the Lambs' Club. "I have no home," wrote Mr. Goodwin, "save the one I am now occupying, and the house you are now living in from May 1 belongs to somebody else. I would suggest your looking up a flat, but will write my views fully in a few days." She was amazed at the receipt of this letter, she says, and was particularly astonished at the part concerning the house, as her husband had given the place to her just before their marriage. The deed, however, had never been recorded, as she learned by examining the records. She went home alone, and has never seen him since. In her application for alimony she puts in affidavits giving Mr. Goodwin's financial condition. She alleges that his income is from $30,000 to $50,000 and that he has plays worth $100,000. Mr. Goodwin in his answer denies nearly all his wife's allegations. He says that when it became evident that his wife was not going to be cured in a short time he proposed that they rent their house at the end of the present theatrical season, and take a trip in Europe for the benefit of her health. She seemingly consented to this plan, but has suddenly changed her mind, and refuses to rent the place. He declares that he has not deserted her, nor has he given up the house permanently. Concerning his property, he denies that his average income is more than $15,000 a year, and he declares that he has no interest in plays worth $100,000. About the house, he denies that he ever gave it to his wife. He also denies that she sent him word that she was cured and wanted to return home, and he declares that he did not know that she had returned home until three days after she had arrived there. Concerning his wife's nervous affliction, he denies that it was caused by the accident in the Park, and says that she had the same malady when he married her. Mr. Goodwin declares that he had no intention of abandoning his wife, but he admits that he proposed a separation agreement to her, which she rejected. Decision was reserved on the motion for alimony. Mr. Goodwin's counsel offered to pay $75 a week alimony to Mrs. Goodwin, providing she would give up the house in West End Avenue. He also offered to pay a reasonable counsel fee.

THE MADISON SQUARE GARDEN CO. stockholders held their annual meeting May 12, and elected the following directors: Hiram Hitchcock, J. Pierpont Morgan, D. O. Mills, Frank K. Sturgis, Charles Lanier, Adolph Ladenburg, Herman Oelrichs, H. H. Hollister, David H. King Jr., John Sloane and Stanford White. Messrs. King, Sloane and White replace Thomas W. Pearsall, William F. Wharton and Harry I. Nicholas on the board. Financial statements for the year were presented. There was not a deficit, and the floating debt had been wiped out. T. H. French, whose firm is a stockholder, and who attended the meeting, said the financial statement showed a balance "on the right side of the books."

THE Board of Directors of the Players' Club met May 12, and elected William J. Florence to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Lawrence Barrett. The Board of Directors now consists of Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson, William J. Florence, A. M. Palmer, Augustin Daly, Judge Joseph P. Daly, Stephen Olin, Laurence Hutton and Wm. Bispham.

JOSEPH BROOKS, manager of W. H. Crane, arrived in New York from Chicago May 12. Mr. Crane has two more weeks to remain in the city of the World's Fair, and on May 25 he will appear at Brooklyn, when "The Senator" will hold his last week's levees for the present. With the close of the Brooklyn engagement Mr. Crane's season will end, and he will retire to Cohasset, to pass the Summer in alternate enjoyment of the bracing ocean breezes and preparation for the coming season.

DARK THIS WEEK.—The Academy of Music, Star, Niblo's, Lyceum, Amberg's, Metropolitan Opera House, Eighth Street, Herrmann's, Harlem Opera House and Harlem Olympic are closed.

STUART ROBSON'S third week at the Union Square in "The Henrietta" began promisingly April 18. He closes May 30.

"THE MERCHANT" continues at the Madison Square, where it has thus far drawn large houses. It will stay about six weeks longer.

THE Summer opera season in town has started with a boom. "Wang" at the Broadway, "Apollo" at the Casino, "The Tar and the Tartar" at Palmer's and "Ship Ahoy!" at the Standard are all thriving, and are likely to thrive for some weeks to come. Next week the Grand Opera House will open its English opera season, and the Harlem Columbus will also offer musical entertainments to its patrons on and after April 25.

"REILLY AND THE 400" is headed towards its 175th performance at Harrigan's. It will get there next week. It is sure to put 200 representations to its credit, and then it will be about time for Manager Hanley and Edward Harrigan to go to Schroon Lake for the Summer.

AT PROCTOR'S, "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows" is still attracting good sized audiences. It is to continue until the middle of next month.

THE LYCEUM reopens April 25, for a Summer season, with R. B. Mantell as the star. This will be Mr. Mantell's first venture under his management, and the first appearance of his reorganized company. The plays—"The Veiled Picture" and "A Lesson in Acting"—are also new.

A TESTIMONIAL will be given at the Metropolitan Opera House afternoon of June 4 by the friends and former associates of Col. John A. McCaull, as an expression of esteem for his earnest endeavors to supply the public with the best order of comic operatic performances, and as some return of the many favors and kindnesses that all have received from his hands. No name has been longer or more prominently connected with comic opera in this country than that of Col. McCaull. As for singers of comic opera, it would be safe to say that the larger part of those who are prominent today in this country have been connected in some way or other from time to time with Col. McCaull. Among those who will appear in this entertainment are the Casino Co., with Lillian Russell, Francis Wilson and his company, De Wolf

BIJOU THEATRE.—After a preliminary skirmish in Western fields, Manager Robert B. Monroe brought his droll star, George W. Monroe, and the Monroe Celebrities to New York, May 18, for a real test of "Aunt Bridget's Baby." The Bijou was well filled, though it was not crowded, this being due, perhaps, to the fact that the town had three other novelties to divide its attention; but those who made up the Bijou's audience gave the Monroe Celebrities a very warm welcome, and throughout the performance there was no stint of kindly plaudits and honest, unforced laughter. THE CLIPPER has already published the plot of "Aunt Bridget's Baby," and our Omaha, Neb., correspondent, who assisted at the infant's christening, advanced the prediction that it would live long and prosper after it had been carefully nursed. In this opinion we are now able to concur. The Bijou's house liked the farce very much at times. The dialogue is brisk and occasionally witty. The story is fairly interesting, and the stage pictures are generally attractive and novel. The piece, however, does not depart materially from the conventional forms of latter day farce comedy. It is good in its class, and that is paying it the best of all tributes. We append the full cast:

Bridget McVeigh	Geo. W. Monroe
Owen McFee	Ed. Heffernan
Shadow Pinchem	Thos. Le Mack
Captain Astoroid	F. W. Holland
Dudley Astoroid	J. Aldrich Libbey
Bruce Ashton	W. Andrew Mack
Jonas Dobbins	J. P. McSweeney
'Enry Joplin	J. H. Cavanaugh
Seta Lamont	Charlotte Burby
Annette De Dong	Saidie McDonald
Simultaneous Exclamation	Leo Gordon
Billy	Frank Casey
Sophie	Catherine Gerald
Dary Sones	Royce Alton
Eloise	Ada Dare
Calls Thenies	Kate Davis
Splinters	Nellie Rosebud

The executive staff, under Manager R. B. Monroe, includes Roland G. Pray, business manager; Watty Hydes, leader; Frank Holland, stage manager, and C. H. Lewis, properties. The three scenes displayed were excellent, and the costumes were at all times bright and taking. George Monroe gave his familiarly unctuous impersonation of Aunt Bridget, and was heartily applauded by his many friends in front. But the real hits must be credited to Kate Davis, Saidie McDonald, Nellie Rosebud and J. Aldrich Libby. Miss Davis, in particular, scored a triumph by her vocal solos, her mimicry and her admirable comedy work as the verbose and prim female professor. Saidee McDonald's dancing was as piquante and as artistic as one could wish, and quite captivated the spectators, while Nellie Rosebud's terpsichorean specialty was also a very clever and effective bit. Thomas Le Mack, who is new here as a white face comedian, was occasionally humorous, and will do better when he has become accustomed to his work. He is to be complimented, however, for his song and dance, "The Lilly and the Rose," which is as neat and as sweet as anything we have seen in this line in many a day. It earned four or five encores, and it deserved them, too. A mandolin concerted number by the company was another novelty that was excellently done. The choruses were well drilled, and the inaugural performance moved with much spirit. "Aunt Bridget's Baby" is booked at the Bijou for a fortnight's stay. It ought to do well.

DORIS' EIGHTH AVENUE MUSEUM.—The Summer season of comic opera was inaugurated last week at this resort, and crowded houses was the rule during the entire week. The company selected by Manager Doris was in every way capable, and the success attained last season will no doubt be easily duplicated. This house was actually the first in New York to place comic opera before the people at prices within the means of all who appreciate this class of entertainment. The principals engaged for this season give to their characters a creditable portrayal, while the choruses are strong in point of numbers. The operas are well staged. The scenery and costumes are showy and effective. The specialty programme to alternate with the opera this week is composed of the following people: Kasten and Higgens, May Bohee, Higgens Bros., Mabel Sisson and Kasten Sisters. The entire museum floor is this week devoted to a score of pretty women in a contest of skill in flower making. Each visitor is entitled to vote his choice as to which among them is the fairest in point of beauty.

GAIETY MUSEUM.—The management report continued good business. This week's bill: Curio hall—Eugene and August Hornbacker, Mons. De Sauriu, Ben Frenchman, Maida, Prof. Goodman, Mme. Zoe Yura and the Carrie Brown murder. Stage—Louis Thiel, supported by the stock, in "Hector the Hunter."

GRAND MUSEUM.—This week's bill: Curio hall—Prof. F. Selden, Sig. Minetti's monkeys, Wild Burt and Little Sure Shot, Mons. Forber and James Bradley. Stage—Edith Atkins, supported by the stock, in "The Main Point." Good business is reported.

HENRY F. WINGMAN, known as the "Man Bird," has brought suit in the Sixth Judicial Court against the management of Worth's Museum for $25 unpaid salary. Wingman engaged for a week, but after his first appearance he was discharged, the management claiming that his act was not good enough for the stage performances. Judge Lachman reserved his decision as to the difference between a "freak" and an "artist," upon which point the case hinges.

H. R. JACOBS' THEATRE.—James Reilly, the German comedian, proved himself to be a great favorite with the patrons of this house at the opening performances, May 18, in "The Broom Maker." His dialect and singing were as well as usual and his support was good. The cast is as follows: Yon Shang, Jas. Reilly; Col. Roughton, Ed. H. Thayer; Jerry Barry, Ed. C. McHugh; Silas Bean, J. K. Bernard; Father Muller, Frank E. Base; Fly Sam, Frank Travers; Madame Vanderburg, Louise Remming; Gretchen, May Templeton; Mutter Muller, Nina Bach; Etta, Little Edna; Hans, Master Robie; Widder McFay, Clara Reese; Fancy Tips, George Travers. During the third act the Wittmark Brothers introduced their specialty, "Reilly's Cellar Door," and were well received. Next week, "Alone in London."

THE Theatrical and Mechanical Association, Lodge No. 1, of New York, recently presented to Manager M. W. Hanley, of Harrigan's Theatre, through Robt. J. Cutler, one of its officers, a costly and beautiful badge emblematic of the order. The society also made Mr. Hanley an honorary member.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATRE.—Annie Pixley, in "Kate," was greeted by a fair sized audience here, May 18. Her reception was quite cordial. The character of Kate, and the many scenes which environ the part, from the time she appears at the front, in army toggery, are the most improbable of any yet witnessed, and the theme itself has grown threadbare in its many workings over. The play has undergone no change since its recent engagement at a city theatre, and the cast remains the same, as follows: Kate Desmond, Annie Pixley; Major Randall, Joseph Brennan; Jack Randall, John T. Burke; Richard Craven, Charles C. Brandt; Captain Marmon, Frederic Sackett; Corporal Crabtree, Charles H. Bradshaw; Sergeant O'Toole, Ben F. Grinnell; Tim Sheridan, Master James Simpson; Captain Randolph, W. F. MacNichol; Mrs. Craven, Carrie Reynolds; Mrs. Lawson, Annie Douglass. Executive Staff—C. H. Bradshaw, stage manager; W. H. Nelson, musical director; W. F. MacNichol, master of properties; Smiley Walker, business manager. Next week, Harlen and Hart in "Later On." "Blue Jeans" will be restored to the Fourteenth Street late next Fall, and will be retained there throughout the season.

HUBER'S PALACE MUSEUM.—There is no denying the popularity of this resort as a delightful and interesting place to while away an hour or two in good, wholesome amusement. The attractions provided by the ever watchful and enterprising management are of an exceptionally high order of merit, while the halls are commodious, comfortable and pleasing to every sense. The graceful, athletic and comely contestants in the ladies' sculling race are to remain another week ere the result of the unique match is officially announced. Sonwell, the serpent king, is the newest feature in the curio rooms. His fortitude in handling ugly rattlers, huge alligators and wicked scorpions excites the admiration of every spectator. Other attractions in the exhibition halls include Little Raffin, Satanella and a troupe of trained monkeys. The stage entertainment for the week commencing May 18 is furnished by the Donlato Specialty Co.

WORTH'S MUSEUM.—Business continues excellent. The standard adopted by Manager Worth when this house opened, that nothing objectionable would be permitted in any department, but that, on the contrary, a clean entertainment, with clean surroundings, should be the motto, has tended to cause this house to jump into popularity at a bound, and accounts in a great measure for its standing today among the popular amusement resorts of this city. An innovation is being tried in the museum department this week. There are no freaks nor monstrosities to behold, but, in their stead, a convention of ladies in solos upon musical instruments. The change, if only for its novelty, would be pleasing, yet the instrumentalists acquit themselves with good effect, and the audiences are as large as the place can comfortably hold. Among those who excel in skill and sweetness are Mabel Arnold, in cornet solos; Miss Morris, in banjo playing, the Pansy Sisters on the violin and Miss Connolly's mandolin and guitar solos. In the theatre a season of opera was inaugurated May 18, when a capable company, headed by Louise Searle, gave to "The Bohemian Girl" a finished rendition, in every way a credit to all who participated. The opera was also well staged and expensively dressed. No other stage performance will be given during the opera season, as it is the intention to give the several operas almost in their entirety. Louise Searle did not in the least slight her part, and was well supported by the following people: Marion Chase, Julie Irving, Emie Waite, John Dewey, Allone McDonald, R. J. Harlan, J. B. Bradbury, Richard Oakley, Edward Depew, Wales Winter and a competent chorus.

JUDGE LAWRENCE, of the Supreme Court, has vacated the order under which S. Victor Flechter, a dealer in musical instruments at 23 Union Square, was arrested April 6 in a suit brought by J. Beresford Fox, to recover damages for alleged fraud and deceit. Mr. Fox charged Mr. Flechter with selling him a violoncello as a Stradivarius, when he knew it was not. Judge Lawrence says the proof of fraud is not sufficiently strong, as presented by Mr. Fox, to warrant the order of arrest.

NEW PARK THEATRE.—John C. Rice, formerly for years a widely liked member of the firm of Monroe & Rice, made his first metropolitan bow as a single star on Monday evening, May 18, in "A Knotty Affair," a new three act farcical comedy by Herbert Hall Winslow. The popular comedian and his new associates met with a very enthusiastic reception from a large and friendly audience. It was the individuality of the actors, and not the piece, however, that called for the generous greeting. "A Knotty Affair" in no way belies its name. Like other latter day works of its kind, it is almost entirely devoid of plot, and even what little there is becomes so twisted and tangled up in the telling that it would take a Job to unravel it. The troubles of an editor, who assumes the guardianship of a harem scarum young girl, whose sister is his affianced, is the very slight thread upon which a large and varied assortment of specialties is promiscuously strung. The first act is remindful of an ordinary afterpiece, while the second and third are made up of a succession of specialties, some good and some bad, and all exploited with an utter disregard for the formality of the conventional introductory dialogue. Yet some of them were very refreshing. Mr. Rice somewhat surprised his friends with his new dialect. He doesn't make a good German, however, for he is best when he is himself. His revival of his old time imitations of a ballet dancer was a highly agreeable bit of personality. The most emphatic bit of the performance was scored by Chas. J. Ross and Mattie Earle (who replaced Mabel Fenton, who was severely burned not long ago), in their amusing little travesty, entitled "Antony and Cleopatra." The dialogue and "business" in this act are enormously funny, and the performers were applauded to the echo. It is a great pity, by the way, that the whole performance was not built up to and around this splendid tidbit of burlesque. George W. Barnum deserves special credit for his excellent impersonation of a hot blooded Portugese nobleman. His accent and make up were artistic to a degree. Gus Frankel also scored a hit in a character part that fitted him like a glove. The Manhassett Quartet rendered a repertory of choice songs in a very admirable manner. Their imitation of a banjo was a capital piece of vocal work, and called forth repeated encores. Little Bessie Clayton, a young and remarkably supple and lithe-limbed dancer, executed some difficult movements with charming grace and abandon, and was warmly applauded. The others in the cast were evenly good. The costumes were fine and at times gorgeous, notably the Kirmess dance in the third act. The cast:

J. Proctor Knott	John C. Rice
Wilhelm Van Keuren	Chas. J. Ross
Benjamin Franklin Sniggs	Gus Frankel
Don Roderigo Aguila De Lopez	Geo. W. Barnum
Squire Jabeg Fielding	Joseph J. Riley
Jackson Jones	Chas. C. Cherrye
Detective Smart	George Gaskin
Sadie Fielding	Helen Lowell
Madge Morrison	Mattie Earle
Dudu De Forest	Fanchon Conyer
Marguerite Montmorency	Nellie Ransom
Clementine St. Clew	Grace Chase
Blossom	Bessie Clayton
Silas Caw	John Griffin
Silas Caw Jr.	Edward Lang
Kitty Carleton	Sally Cohen
Dora Fielding	Patti Stone
Leonora	Florence Barry
Mrs. Caw	Ada Jones

The company is under the management of E. J. Nugent, with Joseph W. Spears as business manager; Chas. W. Scanor, agent, and W. P. Brown, musical director. "A Knotty Affair" will very likely run the season out at the Park.

THE BENEFIT which was to be given at Palmer's recently to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dacre, but which was postponed, will take place positively Monday afternoon, June 1. Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, Rosina Vokes, Rose Coghlan E. J. Henley, J. E. Dodson, Thomas Whiffen, Herbert Kelcey, John T. Sullivan and others will take part.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—The last week of the season at this house opened May 18, and will long be remembered by those present, for three reasons, it being the initial performance in this city of D. K. Higgins' new act sensation drama, "Kidnapped," the large audience in attendance (for there were few vacant seats), and the fact that a noisier, more demonstrative audience has seldom been seen even on the Bowery. It was evident from the rise of the curtain that the crowd came to be entertained, and were ready to give a rousing reception to the young author and actor. The lithographs picturing some of the scenes, although a little outside the reach of stage realism, depicted startling situations, which struck the fancy of the People's clientèle, and fully demonstrated to the East side theatre goers that the play belonged to that class which fires one's feelings of justice. The plot of "Kidnapped was printed in THE CLIPPER of June 14, the piece having received its initial presentation at Chicago April 27, 1890. The cast at the People's: Grace Baybrook, Georgia Waldron; Annie Blake, Madeline Bouton; Meggie McMooney, Dickie Delaro; Daisy, Marie Fearsall; Mother Fujeol, Jane Warren; Philip Northcotte, Arthur Byron; Antoin Lazette, Benn Sackett; Mosey, K. Kinzie; Michael McMooney, John W. Foster; Martin Baybrook, J. H. Williams; Blacky, Chas. C. Rouse; Hawksley, Wm. Byles; Hans, Fred Murray; Louis Rhinegold, D. K. Higgins. The applause after each act was deafening this being especially so after the second and third acts, when Mr. Higgins and Mr. Byron were called before the curtain. Those in the cast worthy of special notice were D. K. Higgins, who played the part of a German dude very acceptably, and, being the hero, naturally drew the audience to him. Benn Sackett was a clever villain, his makeup as a gentleman, and then the murderous, thieving rascal, being excellent. K. Kinzie was good as Nosey. Dickie Delaro, as Maggie McMooney, and John W. Foster, as Michael McMooney, the policeman, were funny and fully demonstrated that they could put their audience in a good humor and hold them, no matter what turn the action of the play might take. Georgia Waldron, as Grace Baybrook, and Madeline Bouton, as Annie Blake, acted their parts well and did conscientious work. Jane Warren, as Mother Fujeol, the old French hag, had nothing to do but to look hideous, which she did to perfection, for a more horrifying, repulsive face could hardly be imagined, her makeup being excellent. In "Kidnapped" Mr. Higgins has a sure money maker, if booked in the right class of houses, for it pleases the upper tiers, and there is its success.

KOSTER & BIAL'S.—Peggy Pryde, the popular and talented daughter of Pat Hill, made her first appearance in this country at this resort May 18. She scored an instant and emphatic hit. Miss Pryde possesses a pleasant and agreeable personality, and inherits the versality, vivacity and artistic methods of her mother. She sang three rollicking English songs with fine effect, and executed some intricate and lively dances with a deal of ease and grace. Miss Pryde will, no doubt, become a big favorite here. Other new entertainers on the bill included Fraser and Allen, musical comedians; Imogene Comer, singer; Sherman and Morrissey, burlesque trapezists; A. O. Duncan, ventriloquist; Dixon and Lang, and Madge Lessing. Carmencita is still in high favor, while "Adam's Temptation" is retained as the leading musical feature. Business is immensely satisfactory.

TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE.—A large audience was on hand May 18, and bestowed hearty and generous approval on a bill bristling with solid favorites. Frank Bush, Lottie Gilson and Flora Moore were retained as leaders, and they had some splendid lieutenants in Winifred Johnson, a clever banjoist and a neat, artistic dancer; Will Davis, Irish comedian; Petrie and Elise, a popular sketch team; Theo, a talented musician; the Julians, acrobats of acknowledged ability; Frank Riley, black face comedian; Hellac and Aouda, sketch performers, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morphet in a novel magic entertainment. Mr. Riley, who is now in the East, made a very favorable impression, and will become popular.

NELLA R. GOODWIN'S application for alimony in her suit for a separation from N. C. Goodwin, the comedian, on the ground of desertion, has been decided in her favor by Judge Lawrence of the Supreme Court. The decree allows her $75 a week and $250 counsel fees.

STANDARD THEATRE.—"Ship Ahoy!" returned to the home of its first success May 18 and was greeted with much fervor by a large audience. The pretty little opera has undergone some revision since it was last heard here, and it is now in excellent shape. Of the new people in the cast, Marion Giroux, a nimble dancer and an always pleasing comedienne, and Alf. Pollock, a comedy woman and a clever singer, made decided hits. Jerome Sykes was very commendable as the bankrupt manager. The scenery was fine and appropriate, and the costumes were new and elegant. The cast: Commodore Columbus Cook, T. J. Cronin; Col. Mapleson Mulberry, Jerome Sykes; Lieut. Lollypop, Wallace McCreery; Ensign Toddles, Frank Ridsdale; Barnacle Duff, George A. Dalton; Simpson Christy, Alex. B. Gourlay; Executive Officer, Harry Rattenbury; Benedict, Edward Barton; Captain of Cadets, Helene Beatrice; Lieut. of Cadets, Nellie Russell; Midshipmen, Miss Rice, Miss Moore; Mlle. Auburni Ernani, Lotta Gilman; Mlle. Georgia Carolina Cecilla Pollock; Mlle. Lula Lala, Marian Giroux; Brunetta, Ethel Ormand. The company is under the direction of J. M. Hill, with J. Louis White, as acting manager, and Chas. A. Metcalf, representative.

LONDON THEATRE.—Manager Donaldson has his own company on this week, and two good houses greeted them May 18. The bill introduced Roger and Belle Dolan, Al. Reeves, the Watsons, Pearl West, Mathews and Bulger, C. Edgar Foreman, John W. Myers, Conroy and Mack, James F. Hoey and Leslie and Hardman. Next week, "The Night Owls." On 21 Treasurer Bull's annual benefit takes place, when a splendid bill is promised. Robert Recker will be on hand at 10 o'clock A. M. 21, to rehearse the people.

JOHN R. DORIS, the museum proprietor, was arraigned in the Special Sessions, May 18, on two charges of violating the Sunday law, preferred by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Both charges were dismissed.

ROSE COGHLAN, in "Forget Me Not," attracted an excellent attendance May 18, at the Grand Opera House. Miss Coghlan took ample advantage of the opportunities afforded her in the part of Stephanie, and valuable support was given her by John T. Sullivan, Thomas Whiffen, Frank Lander, Beatrice Moreland and Jennie Weathersby. "Peg Woffington" was to be given 19, and "London Assurance" 20, Miss Coghlan appearing as Lady Barter and Nance Oldfield 22, 23, the concluding nights of the regular season at this establishment. The six weeks' season of English opera, under the direction of Jas. W. Morrissey, will commence 25, being the occasion of the annual benefit of the attaches of this theatre. "Trovatore" will be given durin, the first week, and "Carmen," "Martha," "Faust," "The Bohemian Girl" and "Lucia" will follow, and each have one week's run.

PROF. R. C. STANTON, who styles himself "King of Hypnotists," has engaged the Windsor Theatre for Sunday night, May 24. The Vienna Lady Orchestra will assist in the entertainment.

RICHARD MANSFIELD produced his own new play, "Don Juan, or the Sad Adventures of a Youth," at the Garden Theatre May 18, for the first time on any stage. It had been eagerly awaited, and its christening was of course attended by a brilliant, handsome and essentially representative audience. Any essay by Mr. Mansfield is now sure of thoughtful attention from the best playgoers in this capital. The Garden's audience was keenly appreciative of the significance of the production, and Mr. Mansfield had no reason to complain of lack of warmth from his spectators. They saw a series of notably handsome stage pictures, but they did not, at the same time, listen to an entirely successful play. We give the full cast:

Don Alonzo	D. H. Harkins
Don Duis	W. H. Crompton
Don Juan	R. Mansfield
Gusman	H. G. Andrews
Leperello	W. J. Ferguson
Sebastien	V. Sternroyd
Aged Innkeeper	Harry Gwynette
Attendant	Ivan Peronet
Attendant	Finch Smiles
Donna Julia	Ada Dwyer
Donna Emilia	Hazel Selden
Donna Elvira	M. Holloway
Zerlina	Minnie Dupree
Anna	Rolinda Bainbridge
Lucia	Beatrice Cameron

New scenery had been painted by Homer Emens and M. F. Reid, and new music had been composed by Mr. Mansfield, who also designed the costumes, rehearsed the actors and generally supervised the production, before and behind the curtain. There was a fair amount of applause, and at the finish Mr. Mansfield was called before the curtain. Nevertheless, we venture to assert that the first nighters' verdict cannot be taken as indicating the fate of the play. Later we will review its merits and demerits more at length. The cast was evenly good, W. J. Ferguson and Beatrice Cameron doing conspicuously effective work.

MINER'S BOWERY.—Manager Roble has engaged a strong house company for this week, which was greeted by two fair houses May 18. Here are the people: Saunders and Burdell, Garnella Bros., R. M. Carroll, John Hart and A. C. Moreland, Jessie Carl and Bijou Russell, the Emmetts, Guyer and Goodwin, Ryan and Richfield and the Acme Four. Next week, Turner's English Gaiety Girls.

WINDSOR THEATRE.—A fair sized audience welcomed McKee Rankin May 18, who heartily enjoyed "The Canuck." Next week, "The Fugitive."

THE TENDERLOIN CLUB.—The members of this distinctively Bohemian club formally opened their new Summer garden and closed the big parlors at their club house, 114 West Thirty-second Street, May 16, with a very felicitous smoking concert. There was a varied entertainment by A. O. Duncan, Prof. Russell, E. J. Rice, Bernard Reynolds, Leopold Jordan, Willard New ell, McGuinness Ivesgh, S. A. Abbels, Johnny Carroll, Maximilian Hirsch and Col. Milliken. The ceremony of closing the parlors occurred in the early hours of morn, and they will remain locked for three weeks, while a committee of artists will decorate them with all sorts of odd things. It is promised at the opening of the parlors that something will be revealed that will be fantastic to a degree.

NEW YORK STATE.

Brooklyn.

—Although the season waneth and its last dates draw nigh, our managers are putting forth strong endeavors to acquire all the milk there is left in the cocoanut. In the bills of the present week opera, grand, spectacular and comic, forms a leading element, while comedy makes a good second. The opening date of the week is also the closing date at the Lee Avenue. The last curtain of the season fell upon the benefit performance of genial Manager Laurent Howard.

PARK THEATRE.—That the patrons of this house realized that a treat was in store for them this week was manifest from the well filled house that greeted the Lyceum Theatre Co. May 18. "Old Heads and Young Hearts" was presented by the admirable cast in a manner deserving the abundance of applause bestowed. A change to "The Idler" will be made 20. "A Texas Steer" did a big business last week. Next week, "The Senator."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—After giving his patrons a taste of about every line of the drama, Manager Morris this week varies the programme by the introduction of English opera. Kruger's Grand English Opera Co, opened 18, to a large a semblage. "Il Trovatore" was given, with Sig. Del Puente and Albert Gallie as the stars. A removal of the front row of orchestra chairs provides room for an enlarged orchestra, and the production, with its handsome setting and capable chorus, is worthy the good patronage promised. Ullie Akerstrom ended a fair week 16. "Faust" will follow 25.

STAR THEATRE.—Manager Holmes has both eyes open, and plays a trump card this week in the person of Corinne, who opened in "Carmen" 18 to an attendance that made friend H. beam with joy and rub his hands with glee. The new production is quite on a par, and the star was given the reception she is always sure of in Brooklyn. Charles Fostelle and Bernard Dyllyn shared honors with the star. "Under the Gaslight" played a fair week ending 16.

HYDE & BEHMAN'S THEATRE. — Lilly Clay's merry troupe of burlesquers are paying a return visit this week, Opened 18 to fair attendance only. Slavin and Mitchell were strong magnets last week, packed houses prevailing throughout the engagement of the May Howard Co. Next week, Creole Burlesque Co.

The honors of the evening were divided between Mr. Wilson and Marie Jansen, while petite Laura Moor and the other members of the company were generously applauded. Dr. Bill's visit last week was a success. "Fabio Romani" comes 25.

LEE AVENUE ACADEMY.—The curtain was run down for the season 18. The closing attraction was the farewell benefit to Manager Lament Howard. The talent to volunteer their aid on this occasion included Tony Farrell, Eva Mudge, Gertie Boswell, Julia Mackay, Will Lyle, the Star Quartet, Ollie Blanchard, Raymond Wilson, Harry E. Pike, Lizzie Davis, Charles Devore, Ed. Parker, Emile Rothwell, John A. Hogan, Will Burt, Charles Dalton, Little Sure Shot, Lyde Clark, Al. Reeves, David Adroda, John Kendrick.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia.

—As the season wanes business continues to go down. Last week the aggregate of receipts was only fair, even when sustained by houses of exceptional size at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Walnut and Park. Three theatres, the Chestnut Street Opera House, Girard Avenue and Forepaugh's closed their doors May 16, and the end of the current week will see the wind up at the Walnut, National, People's and Carncross'. The People's will reopen June 1 for a supplementary season, but the other houses will be retired for the season. So far, no other manager has announced his closing date, but in two or three weeks it is probable that the caterers to Summer amusements will have the field to themselves.

CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE.—The season here closed May 16 with a performance of "A Night Off," by Aug. Daly's Co., which during the past fortnight, crowded the house with brilliant audiences. The exit of the Opera House causes quite a gap in local amusement circles, and, as Nixon & Zimmerman's other houses—the Broad and Chestnut—have already put up the shutters, the patrons of these enterprising managers must find consolation in the fact that the season at the seashore and mountains is opening in good time to provide them with relaxation. Nixon & Zimmerman themselves are booked for an European tour, and before long the three popular theatres will slumber in sultry solitude, deserted by both managers and patrons.

PARK THEATRE.—The departure, 16, of W. J. Scanlan, who during the week presented "The Irish Minstrel" and "Shandy Maguire" to audiences of good size, marked the finale of the regular season at Manager Fleishman's popular uptown house. The curtain was rung down for an intermission only, however, for the Summer season was inaugurated 18 with a revival of "Nanon" by the Pauline Hall Opera Co., which will occupy the house during the Summer months. In this venture Manager Fleishman is making his initial entrance into the arena of warm weather theatricals, and is led therein by the fact that the majority of his patrons are of the stay at home order. Forepaugh's enterprise in point of theatregoers with continued amusement, merits the substantial recognition which it will doubtless receive.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE.—The success achieved by "Niobe," the three act comedy which received its initial production in this country 11, is pronounced and emphatic. The new play meets with approval from every source, the critics and public being for once able to agree that a comedy of more merit has seldom been witnessed here. Simple in construction, the play contains an unconventional theme, cleanly and humorously handled without monstrosities included in the modern farce comedy. The work attracted crowded houses all last week, and enters on the current week preceded by a generous advance sale. The season at the historic Walnut ends 23. It has been a season of wonderful prosperity, won by the enterprise of Manager Fleishman and Business Manager E. P. Simpson.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Another series of concerts in which Cappa's Band is the conspicuous attraction, are given at this house by Manager Kelly, who has engaged a number of prominent soloists to assist in the programme. Mme. Selma Koert Kronold appears 18 and 22, A. L. Guille 19, and Minnie Pabst 21, 23. The Amphion Male Quartet will assist 20, 23. Walter B Rogers, cornet virtuoso, plays at each concert, and M. Pellacani, piccolo, and A. Archemedi, euphonium, are among the other soloists of the band. The Summer season at the Grand opens 25, Manager Kelly having secured the J. C. Duff Opera Co. for a two weeks' engagement. The annual engagement of Gustave Hinrichs' American Opera Co. begins June 8.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—Count Magri and his wife (Mrs. Tom Thumb) appeared May 18 at the head of a vaudeville company, which includes Ala Zada, George F. and Minnie Kane, "Little Tuesday," Kenzo Brothers, Agnes Hallock, Ava Mosice, the musical monarch; Commodore Middleton and his liliputian ponies, and Ogawa's troupe of royal Japanese and Lilliputians in a musical farce, "Tea Party." "The Midnight Alarm" drew good audiences last week. The curtain falls for the season 23, and Manager Kelly will transfer his attentions to the Grand Opera House. In the closing, as well as in previous seasons, the National has proven a mint to its popular proprietor.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE.—"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was presented 18 by Harry Webber's Co. "Thou Shalt Not" last week was not molested by the authorities, and therefore failed to excite a pronounced furor. It was given to fair houses, with good business. The house is dark 25-30 to give time for preparations for the Summer season, which opens June 1.

GIRARD AVENUE THEATRE.—With the performance May 16 of "Ship Ahoy!" the season at this recently opened house was terminated. The fortnight stay of "Ship Ahoy!" proved fairly profitable, but Manager Snyder, satisfied with what he considers an experimental season, decided to close his new theatre and concentrate his energies on making plans for the future, following the pointers gained in the few months that the Girard Avenue Theatre has been open. There is one particularly good augur of future prosperity which is contained in the fact that from the inauguration of the house to the finish, business showed a disposition to steadily climb up the ladder. The wind up was auspicious, and reflects credit on Manager Snyder's executive ability.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sheridan & Flynn's Co. began a week 18. Gus Hill's World of Novelties did fairly last week. Due 25: Bryant & Richmond's "Keep It Dark."

KENSINGTON THEATRE.—Bryant & Richmond's "Keep It Dark" is this week's card. Last week, the Louise Dempsey Specialty Co. attracted fair audiences. Due 18, Sheridan & Flynn's Co.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—The Henry Burlesque Co. appeared 18. Turner's Gaiety Girls did fairly last week. Due 25: The Fay Foster Burlesque Co.

SOUTH STREET THEATRE.—"The Black Flag" was revived 18. "The Sea of Ice" attracted moderate business last week.

FOREPAUGH'S THEATRE.—After a week of good business, attracted by the Grau Opera Co.'s performances of "The Boh along in their task of putting on the finishing touches with pencil and brush. This new house will seat nearly 1,200 people, for whom crimson plush covered chairs, of the latest and most comfortable design, are provided. On the stage, the new scenery is already in position, and, from a casual inspection of a number of the "sets," I must speak a word in commendation of the artist. Taken in all, the change in the house is such a radical one as to cause surprise to the great majority of people who expected that this new amusement resort would be simply a remodelled Nickelodeon. Such is n t the fact, however, inasmuch as not a trace of the old "Nick" is left save the walls. And one of the most important features has been the care exercised in making the house as nearly fire proof as possible under the circumstances. Next door to the theatre Managers Austin & Haynes have leased a capacious store, whence a number of extra exits are available in case of emergency, and with these and other exits from the two galleries and the main entrance on the street floor, the house can be emptied as quickly as any similar establishment in Boston. The main entrance, leading direct from the street, is especially adapted to the comfort of seat holders on the lower floor, who will have but a few steps to traverse to their comfortable orchestra chairs. On the evening of Friday, 29, there will be a full dress rehearsal of the opening attraction, which will be attended by members of the press and a number of other invited guests, and the formal opening of the house will take place Saturday, 30, as per previous announcement in your columns. The performances will be of the continuous character—so popular there at popular prices—and will consist of variety and opera, and the prices will be 15, 25, 35 and 50 cents, with seats in the boxes (four in number) at 75 cents each.

Cincinnati.—When Uncle John Robinson built the Opera House at Ninth and Plum Streets, he did it with a view of erecting a creditable monument to his name in Cincinnati. There has been a great deal of talk about new theatres here lately. The lease of the Harris expires Aug. 1, 1892, and Robinson's will be in the market to any responsible manager. Before that time, however, Cincinnati is likely to see a palatial temple of amusement built which will be a revelation to the West. John Robinson was proud of the way the circus was received here, and he proposes to perpetuate the name of Robinson by the erection of a magnificent theatre at the northwest corner of Ninth and Vine Streets. He owns the property, and has about closed negotiations for the adjoining piece.

THEATRICAL.

R., California.—We most assuredly do not advise you to "invest your fortune in it." If you are as clever as you say, and the manager you refer to is willing to risk his cash, there is no reason why you should also contribute to the finances. If you can make the trial trip on equitable terms, do so; but we say frankly that we do not look for your success. Entertainments of that order have lost a good deal of their olden popularity, and he must be marvelously clever who will win back the public in any considerable number.

A. D.—1. If he hasn't had the experience, how can "the young man of nineteen" safely say that he has the ability? How does he know it? We don't believe that he can get an engagement if he can't offer a better excuse for his employment. 2. It might and it might not. 3. From $20 to $30. 4. See the notice at the head of this column. 5. He does when he can. 6. From three months to three years or more. It all depends upon the scholar's aptness, physical fitness, etc.

H. C. H., Spokane Falls.—Adelaide Neilson made her last appearance in America at the Baldwin Theatre, San Francisco, Cal., July 17, 1880.

VIC., Richmond.—He was Mr. Fields' partner from 1875 to 1878.

H. F., Fort Smith.—We have not heard of or from them in some time, though we presume they are still in the business. See the notice at the head of this column.

D. D.—1. Yes. 2. Yes. 3. See the notice at the head of this column. 4. Sometimes they employ novices as assistants. 5. No; not unless, indeed, you have a genius for it. 6. That depends entirely upon the painter's or designer's skill, repute, etc. 7. We do not care to recommend any special trade or profession. It is for you to make the choice.

"JIM."—If your act is as versatile and as clever as your description of it leads us to infer, you should easily secure engagements at from $25 to $50 a week. Advertise in THE CLIPPER, and make application to museum, variety and circus managers, giving full details of your specialty.

D. J. C., Laurence.—See the notice at the head of this column.

A CLIPPER READER.—1. We would not advise such a step, especially if you are already gaining an honorable and profitable livelihood. THE CLIPPER has for thirty-eight years constantly, consistently and earnestly discouraged youthful aspirants for stage honors. 2. Not in the long run. 3. Equestrian work. 4. We believe there is.

"MURRAY."—B wins. Denman Thompson played "The Old Homestead" at Brooklyn, N. Y., from April 26 to May 1, 1886.

A. W., San Jo e.—Apply to Chas. Meyer, 119 Fourth Avenue, this city.

R. A. S.—Will H. Morton is his manager.

A B C, Detroit.—We do not know at this writing. As soon as his engagement is made, he will doubtless acquaint us with the fact, and we will then publish the news. Meanwhile, carefully read our World of Players column from week to week.

C. H. W.—We do not care to vouch for the responsibility or integrity of that or any other similar organization or society. You must govern yourself.

CONSTANT READER.—You cannot learn "how to route a company" from any book. Engage an experienced agent or manager, or trust the job to the booking agencies.

F. S. A., Haverhill"—As we keep no record of performers as versatile as the one you instance, we cannot tell you; but it is safe to assert that the woods are not full of them.

H. M.—There has been at least one play with the title you name. Rhea produced it a few years ago. Probably a dozen other plays have been copyrighted under the same title.

J. J. T., Brooklyn.—In 1878.

W. N.—From Harding, music publisher, Bowery, or B. W. Hitchcock, Park Row, this city.

THOR W., Vicksburg.—See the notice at the head of this column. That rule is imperative.

S. F., Boston.—1 From May 1 to June 15. 2. No. Use it and welcome.

X. L. N. T., Lynn —1, May 10, 1885, at the Casino, this city. 2. Early last Fall.

CARDS.

T. J. C., Indianapolis.—If you were playing the bid to count for the seller, the man with the low wins; otherwise his opponent goes out on the high and jack.

N. L. M., Denver.—1. A wins. The points score in their regular order. 2. Yes. We are one.

P. S.—The strict rule is that all must discard before any one is served. This would make A wrong in his claim, but when there are seven in the game (a number that good players would not tolerate) the last two men are generally by agreement allowed to hold out their discards. The reason for such laxity is obvious. You can settle it among yourselves.

SPORT, Buffalo.—B wins on his nines up.

H. K., Fargo.—B wins. Each player having two to go, low and jack counted before high and game.

D. B., Atlanta.—A loses.

N. A.—He must be served at once with the next card and before any of the players who follow him are alped.

SUBSCRIBER.—A wins, having made good his bid with high and low. B was wrong in his claim.

C. A. B., Newark.—A is entitled to a run of six for the last deuce, the cards falling 2, 4, 3, 5, 1, 6 and 2.

BASEBALL, CRICKET, Etc.

A. H. G., Oshkosh —It will suffice to send the results of championship contests and noteworthy incidents thereof.

C. H. S., Boston.—The Harvard team won the championship of the American College Association only once, that being in 1888. The Yale team won the championship of that association five times, including four consecutive seasons, and the Princeton team won once, that being in 1879. Under the title of the College League, these three colleges have contended annually since 1887, with the exception of last season, when Harvard withdrew. The Yale team won the pennant each season.

G. W., Boston.—A. E. Smith and Pacey playing for an eleven of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company against the Belmont Club Aug 9, 1880, at Philadelphia, made 208 runs in partnership before the first wicket fell. Each batsman scored 112 runs in the game. This total, however, has been exceeded twice, Joseph Hargrave and J. Large putting on 220 runs before they were parted Aug. 11, 1876, at Philadelphia, and J. A. Scott and S. Law scoring 219 runs in partnership May 3, 1884, at Pittsburg.

C. F., Pittsburg.—James Galvin made a home run hit over the fence May 3, 1877, at Pittsburg, and thus scored the only run in the game between the Allegheny and Boston Clubs.

J. R. L.—His decision was correct.

TURF.

L. D. A., Toledo.—Flora Temple made her best time, 2:19¾, in the third heat of a trot against Princess and Honest Anse, at Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 13, 1859.

T. W., Brooklyn—On Aug. 25, 1880, at Brighton, C. I., Tenny attempted to run one mile faster than Ten Broeck's record (1:39½), for a purse, but failed, his time being 1:40¾. On Aug. 28, following, on the straightaway track at Monmouth Park, Salvator ran a mile against time, covering the distance in 1:38¾, which constitutes the record for a straight track.

M. C.—The celebrated racing mare Firenze never ran in a race at the Guttenburg, N. J., track.

W. A. B.—Races are not officially timed on the English running turf.

ATHLETIC.

G. F. T., Orange.—Unless the pistol firer declared it "no start," the man who ran through won the prize at issue.

CLIPPER READER, Washington.—According to the amateur definition he would be ineligible to compete as an amateur. Better make application to the Amateur Athletic Union, through J. K. Sullivan, secretary, P. O. Box 611, N. Y. City, for reinstatement.

A. B., Philadelphia.—The best recorded running long jumps, measuring from scratch line to first break of any part of performer's person, are as follow: With weights, 23ft. 3¾in.; without weights, 23ft. 3¼in. See page 83 of THE CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1891.

J. W.—The best records for the standing long jump are as follow: Professional, with weights, 14ft. 8½in.; amateur, without weights, 10ft. 10½in.

W. N., Cleveland.—You will find the information in THE CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1891, which contains records in all branches of sport.

L. R., Chicopee.—See records in THE CLIPPER ANNUAL for 1891; price, twenty-five cents.

BILLIARDS, POOL, Etc.

C. M. C., Haverhill.—The game ended when C couln neither beat nor tie the other players. A was right in claiming the stakes. The claim of B that A "might" miss and thereby become tied with him (B), is babyish.

E. S. P., Hot Springs —No.

RING.

E. S., Rochester.—John L Sullivan was born Oct. 15, 1858. Jake Kilrain was born Feb. 9, 1-59.

S. C. S., Plainfield.—They were not required to go to scale on the morning of the fight, and we cannot say what their exact weights were.

D. R. T., Detroit—Bob Fitzsimmons was born at Helston, Cornwall, Eng. His father was a policeman, and upon his retirement from the force the family emigrated to New Zealand, with the exception of the two elder sons—one of them a seaman in the royal navy, and the other, William, a marine. His other brothers were Arthur, a groom, and Jairet, a shoeing smith. The latter two were very clever with their hands.

M. W., Jackson.—They did not go to scale that morning; consequently we cannot tell you what they weighed.

AQUATIC.

C. J. S., Cocoa.—The Nyad not having gained a place in the race, of course could not beat any other craft starting. The foul may have materially affected the result. The man who bet on the Alfa wins the money.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONSTANT READER, Newark.—A wins. B could not win on a "catch." His argument as to the hour between 11 and 12 was irrelevant and groundless.

A. C. H., Moorefield —Address M. H. Rosenfeld, care of THE CLIPPER. See several cards in this issue.

R. MCC., New York.—Address as per advertisements in this issue. M. H. Rosenfeld, song writer, can be addressed in care of this office.

S. R. W., Philadelphia.—Your card would cost two dollars for one insertion.

T. F. D —A wins, according to your statement.

CHESS.

To Correspondents.

CHAS. A. GILBERG.—Our surprise is only equaled by our satisfaction; THE CLIPPER is very proud to number such friends on its long roll.

I. EDWARD ORCHARD.—The revelation was another surprise and delight, thank you; we anticipate one of the greatest successes of American chess literature from your new column, revived with such cultivated taste, in such a true chess spirit and under such flattering auspices.

Alabama Suimate Tourney.

This tourney just closed off, transferred from The Sunny South, of Atlanta, to The Sunday News, of Baltimore, has proved a triumphant success for its projectors. There were one hundred and eight problems entered, by twenty-three composers, of which no less than fifty-five are credited to the prolific Wm. A. Shinkman. The balance are from Herren Chocholous, Khrenstein, Patzak and Dr. Gold, of Austria; Messrs. Billington, Frankenstein, Holt, Hume, Keeble, Laws, Miles, Raynor and Slater, of England; Rev. J. Jespersen, Denmark; J. N. Ross, Sweden; and from other Americans, Messrs. Bettman Bros', Fitch, Towne, Wainwright, Wurzburg and a joint production by Shinkman and Wurzburg. All this makes the tourney eminently international, and gives it an exceptionally wide spread interest. Of course, the prize bearers and honorable mentioned problems form a splendid body of chess strategy, and we shall do our best to treat our solvers to as many of the choicest as possible.

Messrs. E. N. Frankenstein and J. A. Miles were the judges. Mr. F. was adjudged to have the best three mover; but, he being a judge, did not compete. For the rest, the award run: First prize, F. X. Patzak; second, Geo. Hume; third, Herr Patzak; fourth, Bettman Bros.; best two move, G. J. Slater—no other two move worthy a prize; first and second, in three moves, Wm. A. Shinkman. Best problem in from six to eight moves, C. L. Fitch; second, do., J. Keeble. In addition to these, the award "Commended" is bestowed upon eight problems, viz., Messrs. Laws, Keeble, Hume, Raynor, Bettman Bros. and (three) by Wm. A. Shinkman and upon eight competitions is bestowed the honorable award, "Highly commended," viz., Messrs. Frankenstein (ineligible, for a prize, as above explained); Rev. J. Jespersen, Shinkman and Wurzburg, and (five) by Wm. A. Shinkman.

"THE SUNNY SOUTH."—And so "the wheel of birth and death goes 'round and 'round." There never was a more apt and conclusive practical illustration of great truth, amounting to a principle, that chess is the true Phœnix, which rises purer, fresher and stronger from every attempt to drag it down to some vulgar level. Cranks may seek to besmirch its fair fame, and crankeries may seek to inject themselves a blot on its fair pages; but lo! sooner than you think, chess sloughs off all their contaminations, and comes forth healthier and more hopeful from the victory. This view of chess progress is vividly called up by the brilliant resuscitation of the chess column in The Sunny South, of Atlanta, under the charge of the Southern champion, I. Edward Orchard. In assuming this charge, Mr. O. has signalized his presence and purposes by the best written chess inaugural we ever had the pleasure of reading. Let us give, here and there a taste. "I purpose to make a specialty of games and end games, yet problems—'the poetry of chess'—will not be neglected." * * * "I purpose to give in each issue instructive games with copious explanatory annotations, beautiful and unique problems, difficult and useful end games and a variety of current comments. Some influential chess editors destroy much of their usefulness and actually injure chess by indulging in acrimonious personalities, criminations and recriminations. I shall studiously shun this temptation." * * * "For those who know the game it is not necessary for me to paint its beauties, or assert its dignity, or extol its purity. In the language of the amiable Sarratt, who dedicated his quaint work on music 'to all who love the concord of sweet sounds,' allow me to say to my chess friends: 'May it (chess) long amuse your leisure hours, not as a relief from evil, but as an augmentation of good; not as a diversion from care, but a variation of felicity.' 'Yours, in Caissa's genial bonds,' I. E. ORCHARD."

WE SEE that we did not at first fully "catch on" to Bro. Loyd's great problem scheme. His $500 in prizes is to be divided into the ground work of four tournaments, of which the schedule we recently gave represents the first * * * that the great Havana proposition "goes like hot cakes;" the English chess press not doubting that the coveted entry of twenty masters can readily be filled * * * that J H. Seals & Co., of Atlanta, are to be warmly congratulated on the splendid chess vista opening out before them.

College Records Beaten.

Several hundred spectators gathered at Berkeley Oval, Morris Heights, this city, on Wednesday afternoon, May 13, to witness the performances of the Athletic Union of Columbia College at their Spring sports. The weather was delightful, with little wind to either help or hinder, and the path was in admirable condition. The meeting was, perhaps, the most successful ever held by the Columbians, for, besides the general excellent character of the contests, the occasion was signalized by the breaking of the inter-collegiate record for the running long jump by Victor Mapes, who cleared a distance of 22ft. 9¼in. Herbert Mapes also came very close to the record in the hurdle events, and several Columbia records were excelled. Summary:

One hundred yards run—Won by Victor Mapes, '91, Arts; H. T. Harding, Physicians and Surgeons, second. Time, 10⅝s. In the dash between '93 and '94 men, E. N. Erhart won.

Big Lacrosse Throwing.

Hugh Adams, the coverpoint of the Cornwall (Can.) Lacrosse Club, on the opening day of the team practice, May 9, made an attempt to throw the lacrosse ball from lacrosse, a distance of one hundred and fifty yards. A dispatch gives the following account of the affair: "After getting suppled up, he took the ball and made about a dozen throws, the sixth measuring about 159yds. 2ft. When the ball left his stick, Hugh said: 'There goes a world beater.' The ball struck the Eastern fence eight feet from the ground. He made several other throws and succeeded in throwing it 156yds. 7in., which is far in advance of THE CLIPPER'S Australian record. There was no wind. He throws May 23 for a record, and has every confidence that he can excel even today's throw." Adams appears to have made his attempt at record breaking without first having made arrangements to have the performance supervised by disinterested and regularly constituted officials, and under such circumstances, of course, the performance cannot be admitted to the record. It is to be hoped that on the occasion of the May 23 attempt he will take the necessary precautions to have competent officials present, so that the genuineness of whatever he may accomplish may be guaranteed and due credit therefor be given him.

BASEBALL.

DIAMOND FIELD GOSSIP.

Latest Doings and Sayings of the Baseball Fraternity.

President Von der Ahe of the St. Louis Club, of the American Association, expressed himself severely about the umpiring of Matthews after the game May 13 at Baltimore. He complained especially about the decision on Fuller's hit in the third inning, and at once telegraphed to President Kramer, of the American Association, as follows: "St. Louis formally protests today's game. Mathews decided unfairly against St. Louis. By a decision, not allowing a fair hit ball, good for a home run, Comiskey robbed St. Louis of two runs. Captain Comiskey notified him that under the unfair decision he would protest the game, and only played it out on those grounds." Continuing, Von der Ahe said: "Maybe our protest won't go, but Mathews will surely receive instructions that he must improve in his work." Manager Barnie, of the Baltimore Club, says: "How can a game be protested on an error of judgment if such it was? Mathews ran to the home plate when the ball was struck by Fuller, and was the only man standing on a line with it. He said it struck foul, and that settled it. In my opinion he did not make an error, but if he did it was one of judgment. If he had misinterpreted any rule the case would be different."

Secretary Munson, of the St. Louis Club, of the American Association, who as President Von der Ahe's representative has taken an active part in the affairs of the Cincinnati Club, has received advices that Sunday games will be played hereafter regularly in that city. Petitions to counteract Mayor Mosby's stand against the games have received 10,000 signatures, and Mr. Munson believes that many more can be obtained, if necessary. "The theatres are open in Cincinnati on Sunday," he said, recently, "and the people, if allowed access to such amusement resorts, want to have baseball also. They object to unfair discrimination, and if a popular vote were taken on the subject, they would decide in favor of Sunday games by a great majority. Hereafter the players will be arrested and fined small sums after every game, but the exhibition will not be interrupted."

J. Earl Wagner filed May 13, at Philadelphia, an affidavit of defence in the suit brought by E. Cunningham, pitcher of the Baltimore Club, of the American Association, against him to recover $600 which was promised to be paid to Cunningham by Wagner if Cunningham would allow himself to be transferred from the Philadelphia Club, of the Players' League, upon which he was playing, to the Buffalo Club, of the same league. It was alleged that Cunningham had agreed to such a transfer, but that the $600 had not been paid. Wagner claims that whilst on July 23, 1890, he did agree to pay Cunningham the sum of $600 for allowing himself to be transferred from Philadelphia to Buffalo, it was understood between the parties when the contract was signed that if Wagner paid the sum of $300 the remainder of the sum of $600 would be accepted by Cunningham from the Buffalo Club. Wagner says he paid this sum of $300, and holds the return check as a voucher for the same, and that he is informed that the Buffalo Club paid the remainder, so that there is no indebtedness existing between himself and Cunningham.

Thomas McGill, father of W. McGill, pitcher of the St. Louis Club, of the American Association, died on May 12, at Indianapolis, from injuries received in a wreck on April 27.

The championship game between the Manchester and Salem teams, of the New England League, played May 11, at Manchester, was won by the former, by a score of 7 to 2. The Salems failed to make a safe hit off Dunning.

Manager Selee, of the Boston Club, of the National League, has made arrangements with Pitcher Woodcock, of Brown University, to join the Bostons after he finishes his college course.

Lawyer Russell, of Cleveland, arrived at Cincinnati May 12, and took Manager John M. Ward's deposition in regard to the verbal transfer to Al. Johnson of the stock owned in the Cincinnati Club, of the Players' League, by J. Earle Wagner and C. A. Prince.

The result of the recent championship games of the California League is as follows: May 3, at Oakland, morning game, San Joses, 11; San Franciscos, 8. At San Francisco, afternoon game, San Franciscos, 12; San Joses, 1. At Sacramento, Sacramentos, 8; Oaklands, 2. May 8, at San Francisco, it required eleven innings to decide the contest between the San Franciscos and Oaklands, when the former won by a score of 3 to 2. At San Jose, San Joses, 5, Sacramentos, 2. This game was won by the home team in the tenth inning, when they made three of their six safe hits. The losers made nine hits.

Henry Larkin, the first baseman of the Athletic Club, of the American Association, is laid up at his home at Reading, Pa., with a sprained back and injured arm, the result of a collision while running the bases. It may be several weeks yet before he is able to resume his place on the team.

The Pittsburg Club, of the National League, has released Laroque. President O'Neill is quoted as saying: "We have never thought of releasing Carroll. Of course we may release two or three men very soon, but Carroll is not one of them."

A singular feature of a game between the Suisuns and Vallejos May 3, at Suisun, Cal., which resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 10 to 8, was the fact that the victors made only one safe hit against the ten hits made by their opponents. Baltz pitched remarkably well, but was very poorly supported by the Vallejo team.

The Worcesters defeated the Manchesters May 13, at Manchester, N. H., by a score of 14 to 13. The home team put Cross in the box in the middle of the eight inning, and he succeeded in striking out three men with the bases full.

The diamond at Eastern Park, Brooklyn, has been moved out from the grand stand about twenty feet and the direction of the foul lines so changed that it will be a difficult matter to knock a fair ball over the left field fence, while the view from the rear seats in the upper tier of the grand stand is now unobstructed. Several new entrances have also been made, one of which, leading directly to the grand stand, is to be used by ladies.

The University of Pennsylvania team defeated the Lehigh University nine May 12, at South Bethlehem, Pa., by a score of 2 to 1. The winners made only one safe hit off Kernan, while the home team made six off Bowman.

The contest between the Yale and Brown University teams May 13, at New Haven, Ct., resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 11 to 7. The Yales bunched nine hits in the third and fourth innings, when they scored eight runs. Tenny, of the Brown team, made seven catches at left field.

In the seven inning game between the Staten Island Athletic and Tabernacle teams played May 13, at Staten Island, the former won easily by a score of 16 to 0, the visitors failing to get a safe hit off Houghton.

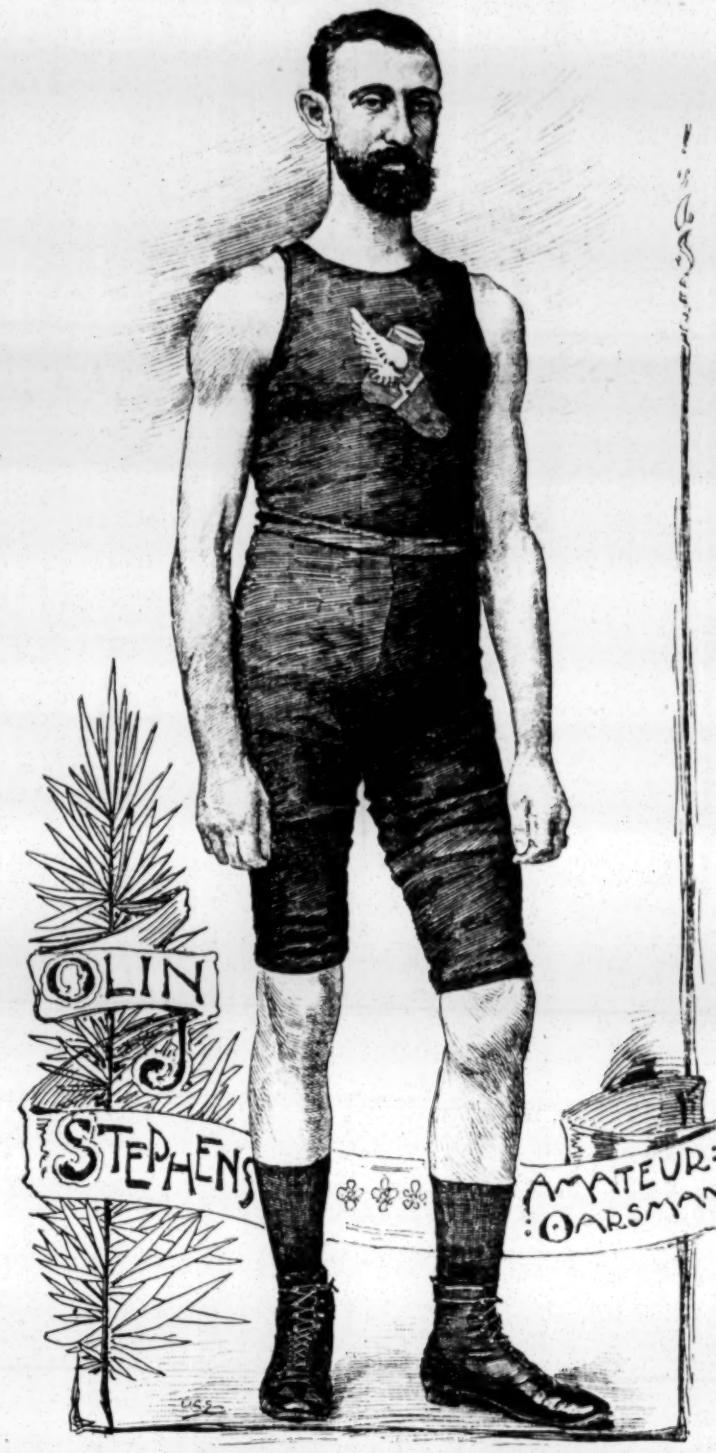
The Princeton College nine met and defeated the Lafayette College team May 13, at Princeton, N. J., by a score of 5 to 2.

The championship game between the Dartmouth and Williams College teams, of the American College Association, played May 13, at Williamstown, Mass., was won by the latter by a score of 21 to 8. Williams won May 14, by 5 to 4.

Visner, who was recently released by the Washington Club, of the American Association, has been signed by the St. Louis Club, of the same association.

The Boston Club, of the American Association, has signed John Irwin, who played third base last season with the Buffalo Club, of the Players' League.

The St. Johns College team, of Fordham, was beaten by the Madisons, of Brooklyn, May 14, at Fordham, N. Y., by a score of 5 to 4.



Olin J. Stephens, whose portrait is herewith presented, is among the best known amateur oarsmen in America, and has numerous trophies in his possession which bear testimony to his skill in handling both sculls and sweeps. He is a native of the Empire City, having been born on Oct. 30, 1859, is full six feet in height, and his rowing weight is about 150lb. He first appeared in public as a member of a tug of war team at the games of the New York Athletic Club in 1878. During that season and the early part of 1879 his team suffered defeat quite often, but after that and until 1881 they very seldom lost, except when over confident or when not having their regular team together. In the Fall of 1882 the team disbanded, and Stephens turned his attention to rowing. He had lost but one individual pull during all the time he was at the game. That was at the N. Y. A. C. games in the Fall of 1880, the winner being W. J. Warwick. He rowed in the eight oared shell of the Union Boat Club at the national regatta at Newark, Aug. 8, 1883, finishing a short length behind the Metropolitans. On the following day, at the same regatta, his crew won the consolation race. On Sept. 8, at the regatta of the Union Boat Club on the Harlem River, Stephens, with S. Van Zandt as bowman, won the pair oared gig event, and was also one of the crews that won the four oared and six oared gig races. On Sept. 29 he was in the winning boat in the four oared gig race at the Fall regatta of the Harlem Regatta Association, and was beaten a length by the Metropolitans in the eight oared shell event. At the Spring regatta of the same Association, May 30, 1884, Stephens and mate were defeated in the pair oared gig race by G. D. Phillips and M. T. Hard, of the N. Y. A. C. June 21 he was in the winning boat in the four oared gig race at the Union B. C. regatta, and on Sept. 27 him and partner again suffered defeat at the hands of Hard and Phillips at the Harlem Association regatta. He had better luck at the Spring regatta of the same organization, on Decoration Day of the following year, being in the winning boat in both the four and six oared gig races, having the stroke thwart in the former and No. 4 seat in the latter crew. Stephens next achieved success in the senior single scull race at the Union Boat Club Regatta on June 20 following, beating three others. He again appeared in costume at the Spring regatta of the Harlem R. A., May 30, 1886, winning the junior singles from four others. At the Fall regatta of the H. R. A., Oct. 9, he was beaten in the senior single scull event, Goepfert winning. A foul occurred between Stephens and Reagan. As usual, "Ollie" commenced the season of 1887 at the regatta of the H. R. A., May 30, but came into collision with Campbell in his trial heat of the senior singles and lost. At the annual regatta of his own club that Summer Stephens won the senior singles and was a member of the crew who won the eight oared shell race. He met with better success than ever at the Fall regatta of the Harlem Association, Oct. 8, capturing the Diamond Sculls and rowing stroke oar in the winning four oared gig. He made his first appearance in 1888 at the H. R. A. regatta, when he repeated his victory by winning the senior sculls. At the regatta of the Long Island Rowing Association, in August of that year, he rowed stroke of the Union B. C. crew in the eight oared shell event, being beaten by the Passaics (now of the Atalanta B. C.). He again won the senior singles at the Fall regatta of the H. R. A., defeating Jim Pilkington, and him and Haubold (with whom he had the benefit of but one week's practice) were defeated by Buschman and Platt for the doubles. Soon afterwards he linked his fortunes with the New York Athletic Club, in whose colors he has since then rowed. He won the senior sculls at the Harlem Regatta in the Spring of 1889, and, with Haubold as mate, also captured the double scull event. At the People's Regatta on the Schuylkill River, at Philadelphia, July 4, of that year, him and Haubold were again successful in the doubles, covering the mile and a half, straightaway, in the unequalled time of 7m. 53⅘s., but they had a very strong current under them. He next appeared at the regatta of his club that Fall, and, with G. D. Phillips as mate, won the doubles after a hard race with George Weiss and E. F. Haubold. He was a starter in the senior singles at the Fall regatta of the H. R. A., when he suffered defeat, the winner being J. D. Ryan. In October of the same year he was a starter in the race for the Osborn Medal, singles, at Travers Island, which he won with comparative ease. He had a hard race at the regatta of the H. R. A., May 30, 1890. The regatta of that year was rowed on the old Empire Course, and the singles was one of the most interesting and exciting features. Stephens won by a quarter of a length from E. J. Mulcahey, of Albany. With George Weiss as partner, he also won the double scull race. Stephens was next seen at the People's regatta at Philadelphia, July 4, where he was defeated by E. J. Carney for the singles and, with Weiss as mate, won the doubles. The same couple also won the double scull shell event at the initial regatta of the Middle States regatta at Newark, in August following, which brought Stephens' work for the season to a close. He first rowed in 1890 at the regatta of the N. Y. A. C., having E. J. Giannini as mate in the double scull race, which they won. With the exception of a double scull race at the regatta under the auspices of the Hoboken Turtle Club, which he and partner easily won, this was about all the rowing Stephens did last season. He will be in harness again during the season of 1891, however, and will doubtless be heard from with credit to himself. There are some events which he participated in during his career with varying fortune which do not appear in the foregoing list, which, however, includes his principal races. Mr. Stephens is in partnership with his father in the coal and wood business at One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and Mott Haven Canal, and is very popular with the amateurs who feather oars on the Harlem.

President Young's disposition of the Powers-Mullane row was incorrectly stated. It was given out that instead of the National Board taking the matter in hand, Young had actually given his umpire, Powers, a decided set back. It was stated that he had reduced Mullane's fine from $250 to $5, and sent Powers a letter telling him he was hasty and injudicious. In commenting upon this disposition of a serious breach or rules, the Philadelphia Press says: "At this distance it looks as though there has been a breach of discipline by somebody. If Powers' action was hasty and uncalled for then the entire amount of the fine should have been remitted, but the very fact that President Young permitted $5 to stand that evidence on the face that Mullane did do something contrary to the rules. True, $250 is a pretty stiff fine, but if a couple of such fines were to go the disgusting wrangles of the ball field would soon be things of the past. It would be interesting to know how Young's letter became public. Powers' usefulness as an umpire has been considerably impaired by the indiscreet publication of his official reprimand." How the statement that Mr. Young had reduced Mullane's fine to $5 could have originated is singular, as there was no truth in it. According to a Washington dispatch, May 14, President Young denied having reduced Mullane's fine, and stated that the full amount would have to be paid by the unlucky pitcher.

A remarkable feature of the championship game between the Omaha and Sioux City Clubs, of the Western Association, played, May 10, at Sioux City, Ia., and which resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 2 to 1, was the fact that the visitors made only two safe hits, against three for the home team. Hart pitched for the Sioux City, and Eiteljorg filled the same position for the Omahas.

Burns' home run hit that won the game May 13, at Cincinnati, for the Brooklyn, was one of the longest hits ever made at the Cincinnati Park, it striking on the fly within ten feet of the picket fence.

The Louisville Club, of the American Association, made Darragh, the first baseman of the University of Pennsylvania team, a liberal offer, but he declined it.

The Baltimore Sun says: "The first series of the St. Louis Club on the Baltimore grounds, just finished, has been one of the most remarkable of the year. The total attendance in round numbers was 24,100, an average of more than 6,000 to a game, and would have been even larger but for cool and threatening weather the last three days. In point of numbers the crowds were the largest which have assembled this season to witness the same number of contests in the American Association. The attendance of 10,412 on May 11 was the greatest at a single American Association game yet, except the one played in St. Louis on Sunday, April 13, with the Cincinnati Club, when 15,000 turned out. Twice the National League has surpassed the Baltimore series in attendance this year according to announced estimates, but it is believed the figures were exaggerated. The four opening games in New York with the Boston team were witnessed by crowds placed at 25,195, of whom 17,315 attended the first contest. But for this immense assemblage, gathered by the lavish use of invitations, the total would have been smaller than that at Union Park's first combats. The first series of the New York and Brooklyn Clubs played partly in both cities, was the best attended of the year. The crowds then numbered 26,272, of whom 17,892 attended the first contest in Brooklyn."

Joseph J. Gerhardt, the veteran second baseman, whose engagement with the Albany Club, of the Eastern Association, was announced May 13, has been made manager and captain of the team.

There will be no change in the outfield of the Cincinnati team, of the National League. Cincinnati waived claim to Elmer Foster several days ago and he signed at once with Kansas City, appearing in the game May 11 at Milwaukee. His bit drove Picket home with the winning run.

The following championship games of the American Association were postponed by rain May 15: Athletic-St. Louis, at Philadelphia; Baltimore-Cincinnati, at Baltimore, and Washington-Columbus, at Washington. The last mentioned was also postponed May 16.

President Wagner, of the Athletic Club, of the American Association, recently visited Manager Bancroft, of the Cincinnati Association Club, at Washington, and suggested that the Athletic and Cincinnati teams should utilize Sunday, May 24—an open date—by playing a transferred championship game at Cincinnati. To do this, however, would require considerable hustling and a special train, as the Athletic and Cincinnati teams must play in Philadelphia Saturday, May 23. Wagner consulted the management of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and after considerable persuasion the latter was induced to undertake the work of landing the two teams in Cincinnati in time for the Sunday game. The Baltimore and Ohio will provide a special train, which will leave Philadelphia with the two teams at 6 P. M. Saturday, May 23, and arrive in Cincinnati on the following day at 1 P. M., and in the afternoon the teams will play the game scheduled for June 5. The train consists of an engine, sleeping and dining car and will be appropriately decorated.

Manager Cushman, of the Milwaukee team, has this to say of the strength of the Western Association clubs played with while on the opening trip: "Omaha is only fairly strong, and will hardly prove a dangerous competitor for the pennant as the team is at present constituted. Lincoln has some good players, but too many ancients among them. Denver is strong all around, and will make the other clubs play ball in order to win. Kansas City is not as strong as last year. Hogriever don't fill Burns' place, and Wilson is not as good a catcher as was Donahue. The team will make a hard fight, but will hardly carry away the pennant again."

An incident, which caused considerable excitement, occurred in the fourth inning of the Columbus-Boston game May 14, at Boston. O'Connor was on third base and Duffee at second, with one man out, and the score 2 to 0 in favor of the home club, when Farrell threw the ball to Joyce, seeing that O'Connor had taken too much of a start off third base. O'Connor kept his eyes on Joyce, and then that player threw to Farrell to head him off. O'Connor threw up his hands, and this had the desired effect of causing the Boston catcher to lose sight of the ball, which rolled to the grand stand. Umpire Kerins at once called O'Connor out, but the player claimed that he did not interfere. Crooks came up to help him, and Captain Lehane was also on hand. Kerins threatened to discipline both O'Connor and Crooks, and took out his watch to give the Columbus men one minute to get into line. The game was finally resumed.

Elmer Cleveland, who "jumped" his contract with the Columbus Club, of the American Association, and was subsequently released, has received an offer from the Troy Club, of the Eastern Association.

Capt. Greenwood, of the Lebanon team, of the Eastern Association, is still unable to play, and has gone to his home in Philadelphia, to put himself in care of a physician.

The game between the Amherst College team and the University of Vermont nine, played May 14, at Amherst, Mass., resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 7 to 4. Each team made only three safe hits, but a wild throw by the short stop in the first inning with the bases full gave the home team the three winning runs.

The uncertainty of the national game was fully demonstrated May 9, at San Francisco, in a championship contest between the San Francisco and Oakland teams, of the California League, when the former by scoring ten runs in the last inning, won by a score of 16 to 10, although the Oakland led by 9 to 0 at the end of the fifth inning.

The protest of Christopher Von der Ahe, of the St. Louis Club, of the American Association, has been received by President Louis Kramer, and he has officially notified the parties interested of that action, as well as Umpire Mathews. "As I understand it," he said, "Mr. Von der Ahe claims that St. Louis was cuchered out of two runs by the umpire, who called an alleged fair ball foul. That is the story wired to me. There is no power vested in me to change that decision, and the game will remain on record, as it has been played in dispute, of course, until the board of directors can take up its case and decide upon its merits. I think that is the only course open. It is defined in section 56 of the constitution of the American Association. This is the second game that has been protested during my administration. By common consent Cincinnati and St. Louis played the first game over. This case will take the usual channel, into the directors' hands."

A telegram announces that one of the most remarkable games on record was played May 16, at Tacoma, Wash., between the Seattle and Tacoma teams of the Pacific Northwest League. It took twenty-two innings to decide the game, which was won by Tacoma by a score of 6 to 5. In the ninth inning the score stood 3 to 3; in the fifteenth each club scored one run, and each again scored one run in the eighteenth, making the score 5 to 5. Chicago Still Leads, with Boston and Philadelphia Following Closely.

Chicago vs. Boston.

These clubs contended again May 12, at Chicago, the home team then taking the lead in the pennant race by reversing the result of the preceding day. Quinn was unable to play with the visitors, and Lowe was substituted at second base while Rooks, a local professional was tried at left field. Nichols was batted hard, the Chicagos bunching all of their hits in three innings, when they scored eleven runs, ten of which were earned. Luby let up after the fifth inning, and the Bostons batted out six runs off nine safe hits. Nash and Dahlen led in batting for their respective teams. Ryan for the first time accomplished the batting feat of hitting a fair ball over the left field fence. Stovey also made a home run and threw out three men on bases.

Timely hitting in two innings helped the Bostons to win May 13, after a closely contested game. In the fifth and eight innings the Bostons bunched six safe hits off Gumbert, and scored four runs, three earned. Getzein held the Chicagos down to six safe hits, three being by Carroll, and which were scattered through five innings. Errors by Long and Tucker, followed by triples by Gumbert and Ryan gave the home team their two runs. A heavy shower just before the game started made the grounds wet and muddy.

The Chicagos evened up the victories in the series, May 14, when they again took the lead in the race for the championship. Hutchison held the Bostons down to five scattering safe hits, four of which were made by Lowe and Brodie. Clarkson was wild in the sixth inning, when he helped the home team to three unearned runs off a solitary safe hit. He, however, pitched very effectively up to the ninth inning when the Chicagos earned five runs off a like number of safe hits, including successive home runs by Wilmot and Hutchison and a triple by Dahlen. Wilmot's hit was over the right fence, the first time this feat has been accomplished on these grounds.

Superior fielding helped the home team to another victory May 14. Ewing was batted hard and often, especially in the second inning, when five safe hits and a base on balls gave the Pittsburgs six runs and a winning lead. The New Yorks had no trouble in batting Staley in the fourth and fifth innings, but three triples in the fourth yielded only two runs, and two doubles and three singles in the fifth brought in only three more runs. King was then substituted in the pitcher's position, and kept the New Yorks down to two hits in the last four innings. The home team in the sixth and ninth innings scored six runs off four safe hits, aided by wild pitching and loose fielding.

from being shut out. The Brooklyns, although they had men on the bases in every inning, failed to score until after two men were out in the last half of the eighth, when Foutz made a single and Burns followed with a home run that won the game. After the first inning Terry pitched in fine form. Duryea kept the Brooklyn's hits widely scattered until the eighth inning.

The Brooklyns were shut out May 14, when the Cincinnatis scored their initial victory of the series. Radbourn held the visitors down to four safe hits, which were scattered through as many innings. The home team hit Hemming hard in the first two innings, when they scored four runs, three earned, off five safe hits, including triples by McPhee, Reilly and Radbourn and a double bagger by Latham. Hemming kept the Cincinnatis from making more than three scattering singles during the remainder of the contest. Daly strained himself in the second inning, and gave way to Dalley. Collins fielded finely at second base, where he accepted all of eleven chances.

Cleveland vs. Philadelphia.

The Philadelphias won again May 12 at Cleveland, the result then being due to their superior batting. Gruber pitched effectively until the eighth inning, when the visitors bunched five safe hits, including two double baggers, and scored four earned runs. Gleason kept the home team down to six safe hits, three of which were made in the seventh inning, but failed to yield a run. Two great stops at third by Shindle saved several runs.

No fewer than fourteen innings were necessary to decide the contest May 13, when the Philadelphias again won. Thompson was sick, and G ay took his place with the visitors. The home team failed to bat Esper until the ninth inning, when they bunched four hits and tied the score. In the fourteenth inning Viau weakened, gave Shindle a base on balls, made a wild throw, and was batted safely three times, allowing the Philadelphias to secure four runs and the victory. A running catch by Hamilton was the fielding feature. Brown, McKean and Davis did the best batting, each making four safe hits.

Beatin and Gleason were both batted freely May 14, when the Philadelphias again won. Gleason kept the hits scattered, except in the fifth and seventh innings, when six were bunched and yielded four runs. Alvord in the first and seventh innings lost easy chances to make double plays that would have retired the visitors without scoring. Beaten was wild in the opening inning, which, with Alvord's error and three safe hits, helped the Philadelphias to seven runs and a long lead. Alvord's error in the seventh was followed by three more safe hits that gave the visitors four runs. Four of the hits made off Beatin were scratches. Davis did the best batting, his four hits including two double baggers.

Chicago vs. Brooklyn.

Heavy batting marked the game played May 13, at Chicago, the home team then winning after an exciting finish. Lovett was pounded all over the field, Ryan opening the contest by a home run drive over the left field fence. Nine safe hits in the first three innings gave the Chicagos eight runs and a good lead. Gumbert was also batted freely, the Brooklyns bunching seven safe hits in the first two innings. The visitors made a good uphill fight, and tied the score in the seventh. Gumbert gave way in the eighth inning to Hutchison, who was hit only twice safely. Dahlen and Burns led in batting for their respective teams, each making four safe hits. Rain fell at intervals, and stopped the game for fifteen minutes in the eighth inning.

Another exciting contest took place May 16, when the home team tied the score in the ninth inning, and won in the tenth. Terry started to play right field, but was hurt and gave way to Caruthers. The Brooklyns bunched five safe hits in the fifth and seventh innings, when they secured four runs and a good lead. Pinkney's poor play allowed the home team to score three runs off only one safe hit in the ninth inning, and four safe hits helped them to three runs and the victory in the tenth. Ryan's batting was the chief feature, he making five safe hits, including three doubles and a triple bagger.

The Chicagos scored their third consecutive victory over the Brooklyns May 18, by timely batting and superior fielding. The visitors' errors proved very costly. Caruthers was in the box for Brooklyn, and did fairly good work, but could accomplish nothing with the miserable support accorded him. Hutchison pitched for the home team, and proved an enigma to the visitors, who made only five scattering hits off him. It was not until the fifth inning that the Chicagos obtained a safe hit off Caruthers; after that, however, they batted him safely eleven times, and earned five runs. The feature was the second base play of Pfeffer.

Cleveland vs. New York.

The opening game of the series took place May 15, at Cleveland, and resulted in a victory for the home team. Rusie was batted hard, Davis leading with four safe hits, which included a triple and two double baggers. The visitors failed to bat Seward during the first five innings, but hit him safely five times in the sixth and seventh, when they scored three earned runs. Young then took Seward's place, and kept the New Yorks from making a safe hit or a run. The weak point of the New Yorks was behind the bat, O'Rourke, however, catching very well, although out of his regular position. The home team took the lead in the first inning, and held it throughout the contest.

The Clevelands won again May 16, when the weather was cold and the attendance small. The contest was close and exciting. Three safe hits, a base on balls, and a passed ball in the sixth inning helped the home team to three runs and the victory. Viau was batted freely, but the New Yorks were unable to bunch their hits. With two men on the bases in the ninth inning Tiernan made a long hit, but was thrown out at the plate in the attempt to stretch it into a home run. Bassett and Richardson led in batting, the former's hits including two triples. Ewing commenced catching, but soon gave way to O'Rourke.

These teams again met May 18, when the visitors sustained their third defeat at the hands of the home team. Rusie was batted freely, although only five of the home team's eighteen runs were earned. The batting by the New Yorks was more timely, and eight of their twelve runs were earned. Ten of their hits were bunched in the second and eighth innings, when they earned seven runs. Costly errors were the chief cause of New York's defeat. Rusie had plenty of speed, but did not have good command of the ball.

Pittsburg vs. Philadelphia.

The first game of the series was played May 15, at Pittsburg, the Philadelphias then winning by superior fielding. The game was closely contested until the fifth inning, when successive errors by Beckley, Reilly and Miller helped the visitors to three runs and the victory. Thornton and Baldwin both pitched very effectively, only six scattering safe hits being scored by each team. Shindle made a wonderful running catch of a foul fly, and a sensational one handed stop that started a double play. Allen also fielded finely at short stop, where he accepted all of eleven chances.

Hard hitting helped the Pittsburgs to a decisive victory May 16. The Pittsburgs pounded Esper for fifteen safe hits, five of which were bunched in the sixth inning. Schultz was then substituted and proved very effective. Myers and Hamilton did nearly all the batting for the Philadelphias, the former making three doubles and a triple.

The Pittsburgs again defeated the Philadelphias, May 18, when they managed to tie the Bostons for third place in the championship race. They batted Gleason hard, and earned a majority of their runs. The visitors also batted Galvin hard, but the latter had excellent support, and the visitors had to earn most all of their runs. Reilly hit for a home run in the seventh inning, and brought in two men with him. The game was delayed considerably by the commotion caused by left the vehicle, went to his room and donned his street clothes. Captain Clements remonstrated with him, but he declined to put on his uniform again. Manager Wright received a telegram from President Reach endorsing his action.

The San Jose Club has a long lead in the race for the pennant of the California League, while the San Francisco and Sacramento teams are tied for second and the Oaklands bring up the rear. Ward, McGuirk, Peeples and Huston of the Sacramento Club are claimed by the Pacific Northwest League, and N. E. Young has decided that they will have to keep their contracts with the latter league.

A strange feature for this time of the year was the postponement on account of cold weather of the championship game between the Syracuse and Lebanon teams scheduled May 16 at Syracuse.

The Western Association games played May 18, resulted as follow: At Milwaukee, Milwaukee, 9; Omaha, 6. At Minneapolis, Kansas City, 24; Minneapolis, 13.

The New York and Pennsylvania League season opened May 14, at Bradford, Pa., the Olean (N. Y.) Club then defeating the home team in a twelve inning game by a score of 8 to 2. Games were also played at that date at Meadville and Elmira, the Fries beating the Meadvilles by 6 to 1, while the Elmiras defeated the Jamestowns 16 to 2.

The San Franciscos defeated the Oaklands May 10, at San Francisco, Cal., by a score of 18 to 0. Cobb kept the Oaklands from making a solitary safe hit, while he made three himself, including a home run when the bases were full. The morning game between these teams, singularly enough, resulted in a victory for the Oaklands by a score of 8 to 5, and the afternoon contest decidedly reversed that result.

The San Joses and Sacramentos played two games May 10, at San Jose, when each won one. The first game was won by the Sacramentos by a score of 6 to 4. The home team won easily in the second contest, when they defeated the Sacramentos by a score of 25 to 1.

The Eastern Association games played May 18 resulted as follow: At Albany, Albany, 12; Troy, 4. At Buffalo, Buffalo, 11; New Haven, 7. At Rochester, Rochester, 8; Providence, 6 (ten innings). At Syracuse, Syracuse, 5; Lebanon, 4.

A Columbus (Ind.) dispatch says: "During a game played May 18, at Nashville, Brown County, Ind., Philip Harden, aged eighteen, completed a successful run, and, seating himself upon a stone, said: 'Tally one for me,' and fell dead."

Only six safe hits were made in the game between the Muhr Club of Philadelphia and the Villanova College nine, May 16, at Villanova. Herron held the visitors down to two hits, while Hahn kept the collegians from making more than four hits. The Villanova College team won by 6 to 4.

A curious feature of a game between the Camdens and Young Americas played May 16, at Camden, N. J., and which resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 4 to 3, was that the home team failed to make a solitary safe hit off the pitching of Conn, while the visitors made no fewer than eleven off Robinson and yet were beaten.

A home run hit by Safford with two men on bases in the tenth inning enabled the Hill School team to defeat the Yale Freshmen by a score of 14 to 11 on May 16, at Pottstown, Pa.

The St. Paul Club, of the Western Association, is said to be in financial straits, and on the eve of disbandment. Manager Watkins of this club has sent his terms to the Wagners, and is very anxious to manage the Athletic Club of Philadelphia.

THE TURF.

RACING AT GRAVESEND.

Tenny, the Favorite, an Easy Winner of the Brooklyn Handicap.

Probably twenty-five thousand persons visited the course of the Brooklyn Jockey Club on the opening day of their Spring meeting, Friday, May 15, and this despite the fact that the weather was indicative of rain, accompanied by fog, indications which did not prove deceptive. Fortunately, however, the rain was not heavy, and did not alter the condition of the track sufficiently to affect the chances of any of the leading candidates for the great event of the day —the Brooklyn Handicap. It was this that brought out such an immense throng of racegoers, the great majority of them with their pockets lined with greenbacks, with which to back up their opinions regarding the most likely winner in the all important struggle for equine honors and the snug sum of $15,000 that was to constitute the reward of the victor. Although the grand stand is this year twice as large as formerly, as is also the betting inclosure, the accommodations were inadequate, and there was the same crush everywhere as is inseparable from occasions of such moment. The announcement that the speedy son of Rayon d'Or—Tenny—had entirely recovered from the accident alleged to have befallen him a few weeks previously convinced the great majority of turf patrons that he had never suffered any real injury at all, and he was made the hot favorite that his performances in his four year old form warranted, although there were quite a number who, dreading a break down on his part, supported some other horse, Senorita being next in favor, with Judge Morrow for third choice. The result showed that the majority were right in their calculations, for the favorite, biding his time till the homestretch was reached, went to the front when called upon and won handily in time that he could have improved upon had his jockey forced him, which he did not do at any stage of the race. The horse's victory would have been more popular had his owner, D. T. Pulsifer, not been deemed guilty of purposely deceiving the public by spreading a report that was not considered to have any foundation in fact. However, the reception accorded Tenny and his proud rider, "Pike" Barnes, was very flattering. Of the other events three were won by favorites, so that the betting public generally fared very well "on the day." Summary; A sweepstakes of $20 each, for all ages, with $1,000 added, of which $200 to second and $400 to third, six furlongs—M. F. Dwyer's Kingston, by Spendthrift-Kapanga, 6—124, J. McLaughlin, the favorite, first, in 1:16; Kingsbridge, by Spendthrift-Kapanga, 4—122, Garrison, second, by a length; Charley Post, by Kinglike-Fan Fan, 4—122, Lambley, third, three lengths.....A sweepstakes of $20 each, for three year olds and upward that did not win a race of the value of $1,500 in 1890, weights 5lb below the scale, a mile and a sixteenth—M. F. Dwyer's Longstreet, by Longfellow-Semper Idem, 5—121, Hamilton, the favorite, first, in 1:49½; Leighton, by Rayon d'Or-L'Argentine, 4—112, Taral, second, by a length; Madstone, by Vanderbilt-Nina Turner, 5—121, J. McLaughlin, third, eight lengths away.....The Expectation Stakes, for two year olds, at $100 each, h. f., with $1,500 added, of which $350 to second and $150 to third, half a mile—Walcott & Campbell's Osric, by Cheviot-Abbie W., 118, Taral, first, in 0:49½; Yorkville Belle, by Miser-Thora, 115, Doggett, second, by half a length; Coxswain, by Rayon d'Or-Lizzie Cox, 118, Clayton, third, a length behind.....The Brooklyn Jockey Club Handicap, for three year olds and upward, at $200 each, the club to add an amount sufficient to make the gross value of the stake $20,000, of which the second received $3,500 and the third $1,500, a mile and a furlong—D. T. Pulsifer's Tenny, by Rayon d'Or-Belle of Maywood, 5—128, Barnes, the favorite, first, in 2:10; Prince Royal, by Kingfisher-Princess, 6—117, Garrison, second, by two lengths; Tea Tray, by Rayon d'Or-Ella T., 6—116, Moore, third, a neck behind. There were twenty-one starters, and a fine lot they were. Little difficulty was experienced by starter Caldwell in getting them going, the send off, which took place about ten minutes after they lined up beyond the flag, being one of the best ever seen. Santiago and Loantaka jumped off slightly in front, close to the inner rails, with Russell next, on the outside. The latter quickly rushed to the fore and led the lot past the stand, setting a stiff pace with which to commence so long a journey. As they went around the first turn there were several collisions, Tea Tray and Prince Royal getting the worst of the scramble, although neither was much interfered with. Several changes occurred as they sped along the far stretch, Tea Tray improving his position on the outside, while Loantaka and Russell continued their struggle in front, followed by Santiago, Nellie Bly, Once Again, Prince Royal, Burlington, Judge Morrow and Tenny. As they began the turn for home Tea Tray was sent along and began to cut down the lead obtained by Russell and Loantaka, while Garrison shook up the Prince, with Tenny following rapidly, though still with strength reserved. Judge Morrow followed closely, and at one time seemed to be a most likely winner, but he failed to get to the front, and after Prince Royal and Tea Tray had disposed of Russell, half way up the homestretch, with the favorite closing, it was apparent that no others but these were in it. Tenny did not catch the Prince and Tea Tray till the stand was half passed, but then he shot to the head of the column in a jump or two, and, going rapidly away, won with ease by a good two lengths. The finish between Prince Royal and Tea Tray for the place was grand, and had Moore been the equal of Garrison it is uncertain whether the issue would have been as recorded.....A sweepstakes of $20 each, for two year olds, with $1,000 added, of which $200 to second and $100 to third, selling allowances, half a mile—J. A. & A. H. Morris' Laughing Water, by Dalnacardoch-Fair Water, 110, F. Littlefield, the favorite, first, in 0:48¼; colt by Duke of Montrose-Lady Longfellow, 108, Bergen, second, by two lengths; Mount Vernon, by Uhland-Di Vernon, 105, Jones, third, half a length behind .....Sweepstakes of $20 each, for three year olds and upward, with $1,000 added, of which $200 to second and $100 to third, selling allowances, a mile and a sixteenth—W. H. Thomas' Benedictine, by Hurrah-Zicka, 6—108, Bergen, first, in 1:50¾; Masterlode, by Kyrie Daly-Bessie Peyton, 4—107, F. Littlefield, second, by a neck; Gallifet, by Falsetto-India, 5—106, Bergen, third, a like distance behind.

The rain which commenced on Friday afternoon continued throughout Saturday, and had the effect of greatly reducing the attendance; still there was a very good assemblage, the card offered being attractive. The track was, of course, very muddy, but was not sticky or holding, and fair time was made in the different events. The Morris stable was in great luck, no less than four races being captured by the horses representing that powerful establishment. The weather on Monday, 18, was a bit too cool for comfort in the vicinity of old ocean, but there was a goodly muster of racegoers, nevertheless, and the pencillers were kept at work from start till finish accommodating those who desired to back up their opinions. In only two events were the favorites successful, so that the bookies were happier than their customers at the close of the afternoon's sport. RACING IN KENTUCKY.

The Kentucky Derby Won by the Favorite, Kingman.

The Spring meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club was opened on Wednesday, May 13, and, the weather being fine, there was the customary immense throng of spectators, business being generally suspended in the city, and everybody who could get away "taking in" the chief annual turf event in the South and West. The track was slow from the depth of dust, which was the only disagreeable feature of the afternoon. Kingman was a tremendously hot favorite for the Derby, and he had not the slightest trouble in winning. There was another good sized gathering at the course on Friday afternoon, 15, the weather continued good and the track first rate. During the afternoon H. Stover and his horses were ejected from the track, owing to a complaint that he accepted a bribe to scratch Linlithgow in the first race, to let another horse win. The track was in capital condition and the racing interesting, but the talent were right in but two instances. Thursday, 14, was the closing day of the protracted meeting on the hill, which had lasted one hundred and eighteen days, without a single postponement, being by far the most profitable meeting ever held under the same management. There was the usual sized crowd in attendance, although the programme, owing to the departure from the grounds of the best of the horses that had been performing there during the previous month, was not as attractive as usual. The weather was pleasant and the track good. Stoval did not ride Ketchum in a manner to suit the judges in the last race, and after the race he was called into the stand and questioned, the result being that he was indefinitely suspended. Theatrical Managers

Are Respectfully Informed that the

OPERA HOUSE

Carbondale, Pa.,

is still under the management of J. O. HEARN, and is not under the management of Newton Jackson. Mr. Jackson has got a small house here. It is an upstairs house, and the stage is small. Our house is the Opera House, is a ground floor house, remodeled by LEON H. LEMPERT, and is acknowledged to be one of the finest in this section of the State. Here are a few of the attractions that played our house this season, and which we can refer to: Daniel Sully, Marie Greenwood Opera Co., Little's "World," Frank Mayo, Amina Opera Co., Kilralfys' "Water Queen," Joseph Murphy, John A. Stevens, Maggie Mitchell, "The Paymaster," "Two Sisters," Gorman's Minstrels, Katie Emmett, "A Royal Pass," "One of the Bravest," "Beacon Lights," Bobby Gaylor, W. J. Scanlan, "Grimes' Cellar Door," Cleveland's Minstrels, "Siberia," "Lost in New York," Wallick's "Cattle King," "One of the Finest," "McCarthy's Mishaps," "The Old Homestead." Our stage is 60x40; flats, 18ft. When booking at Carbondale, do not make a mistake or be deceived, as there is Only One First Class House here, and we will back the assertion in any sum, from one to ten thousand dollars. The Opera House is positively the Only First Class Theatre in this city. For open time, apply to J. O. HEARN,
Manager Opera House, Carbondale, Pa.

BILLIARDS.

The Pool Champion Defeated.

Alfredo de Oro has again won champion honors by defeating Albert G. Powers in Auditorium Recital Hall, Chicago, May 13, 14 and 15. The game was for a stake of $1,000, the continuous pool championship, the B. B. C. Co. emblem and the net door receipts. The emblem of the championship was first contested for at the tournament held in Hardman Hall in 1889, and was won by the late Albert M. Frey. Frey died while a match was pending between himself and De Oro, and the emblem reverted to the latter, from whom it was won by Powers in 1890. It was won from Powers by Charles Manning shortly afterward, but again came into the possession of Powers by default. Manning having failed to post his forfeit money to cover Powers' challenge within the required time. The match of which we write was the next in order. There has been a lively interest displayed in pool matches in Chicago during the past Winter, and patrons of the game there have liberally patronized the different matches and tournaments held there, thus showing that they thoroughly appreciated the treat provided for their delectation. The Powers-De Oro match aroused a great deal of enthusiasm, and was pronounced by the Chicago pool critics as about the best pool playing ever seen in that city. Both men played a nearly perfect game. On the first night De Oro was a little ahead, but the result of that night's play gave no clue as to which would win. On the first night the score was 201 to 197 in favor of De Oro. On the second night De Oro scored 207 to Powers' 160; total for the two nights, 408 to 356 in favor of De Oro. On the third night De Oro scored 192 to Powers' 151, thus making the total for the match 600 to 517. It is reported as we go to press that Powers has challenged De Oro for $1,000 a side and the championship.

GEORGE H. ELLIS, who was for many years identified with the billiard interests of this city, has retired from Sweet's billiard room at Grand Rapids, Mich., and has engaged Lou and Nellie Shaw, the billiard and pool experts, for a ten weeks' tour of the watering places contiguous to this city. The enterprise should be entirely successful in every way, as these players are the best in their line now before the public, and their popular manager will thereby an opportunity to renew his extended acquaintance of old times.

HUGH FOLER AND AL. SMITH had a sette with the cues at Daly & Ubert's Rooms, this city, night of May 18. From a wager of $25 each in the first games played, the sum wagered in the last game grew, through bantering each other, to $500 a side before the completion of the last game. When it is considered that the game was one of but 100 points up, the amount at stake was high enough to cause even the champions to have a tremor.

L. FLANAGAN, of the Union League Club, and J. J. Ridgway, of the Rittenhouse Club, Philadelphia, played a match game at continuous pool, two hundred balls up, at the Racquet Club, this city, last week. The score was 200 to 155, in favor of Flanagan.

ATHLETIC.

Harvard Defeats Yale.

About four thousand persons gathered at Holmes' Field, Cambridge, Mass., on Saturday afternoon, May 16, for the purpose of witnessing the first annual competition of the youthful athletes of Harvard and Yale Colleges for the championship silver cup offered by the graduates of the two institutions. An excellent programme had been arranged, and the crack performers of the rival colleges were arrayed against each other, but unfortunately rain set in shortly after the sports were commenced, and it continued steadily and with increasing strength throughout the afternoon. It made the track heavy, the infield slippery, and interfered with the efforts of the contestants. However, notwithstanding this drawback, Finlay, of Harvard, succeeded in breaking the amateur record for throwing the sixteen pound hammer, excelling Coudon's performance by two inches, and beating the intercollegiate record considerably more. Williams, Yale's crack timber topper, also equaled his former record of 16s. for the regulation hurdle race. Harvard had many more entries than Yale, and the blue was badly left in the general result, Harvard winning the cup by a score of 85 to 27 points. The officials were: Referee, J. E. Sullivan; judges—Walton Storm, A. H. Curtis and H. E. Buermeyer; starter, W. H. Robertson; timers—G. A. Avery, E. E. Merrill, H. N. Wood and A. B. Coxe; field judges—C. W. Whitney, G. S. Struggling in the Rain.

So far as the financial results were concerned the Spring meeting of the Berkeley Athletic Club at their beautiful grounds at Morris Heights, Berkeley Oval, held on Saturday afternoon, May 16, was a failure, owing to the inclemency of the weather, which limited the spectators to about two hundred, who shivered during the continuance of the games, and failed to derive any enjoyment from the competitions which they had looked forward to with so much expectation. Had the weather been pleasant there is no doubt that there would have been a very large attendance. The anticipated record breaking did not come to pass, for the same reason, although, under the circumstances, some capital work was done. Summary:

Death of "Pendragon."

Henry G. Sampson, better known by the nom de plume of "Pendragon," died at his residence in London, Eng., on Saturday, May 16, from pneumonia, which followed an attack of the prevailing "grip," contracted a week previously. Deceased was for many years a sporting reporter on different London papers, including old Bell's Life, the authority on the prize ring and sporting matters generally in its day, but long since defunct, and contributed many articles to other periodicals on sporting subjects. He was both a pedestrian and boxer in his youth, and was thoroughly well posted in his special field of journalism. A number of years ago he conceived the idea of starting a weekly sporting paper that should be thoroughly independent, and the well written articles from his pen on matters both sporting and of general interest, with those written by George R. Sims, the dramatist, on theatrical matters, attracted wide attention and secured for the venture quick success. It became a very valuable property, but in the demise of "Pendragon" its mainstay is taken away. Although a man of most decided opinions and strong prejudices, Mr. Sampson had many friends, and his place will be difficult to fill.

THE ATHLETES who attended the championship meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union at Analostan Island, in the Potomac River, last October, will be pained to learn that the handsome club house of the Columbia Athletic Club at the Island was totally destroyed by fire, together with its contents, on the night of May 16. How the fire originated is a mystery. There was no stove in the structure, which was lighted by a large lamp. The building cost $2,700, and, with the stock of refreshments stored there, the total loss will reach about $3,000. It will doubtless be rebuilt by the plucky and go ahead Columbias.

BOXING AND WRESTLING.—Street & Smith, the well known publishers of this city, have just issued treatises on boxing and wrestling, respectively by Charles Mitchell and William Muldoon, which contain much information regarding those twin arts, of which the athletes mentioned are such noted exponents. They can be read with profit by old hands as well as those who do not yet understand the rudiments of those branches of physical exercise, are profusely illustrated, neatly bound, and sell for the modest sum of ten cents, so there is no excuse for anyone being without these useful little books.

THE FOLLOWING ENTRIES have been received for the twenty-four hour race (contestants to travel four hours each evening, from seven to eleven o'clock) at the Recreation Grounds, Fall River, Mass., commencing Monday, May 25; Peter Golden, Gus Guerrero, Peter Hegelman, George Connors, Tracey, Tim Curley and Harry Fox. The track is constructed of cinders, is a fifth of a mile in circumference, and with good weather some excellent performances should be made.

P. A. C.—The programme for the Spring games of the Pastime Athletic Club, of this city, to be held on June 6, is as follows; 75yds., 220yds., 440yds. and one mile runs, one mile walk, putting the shot (all handicaps) and 880yds. run for novices. Three medals will be given for each event, and the entrance fee is fifty cents for each contest. Entries close on May 30 with John P. Boyle, secretary, No. 1,171 Second Avenue, N. Y. City.

New Rules for Riders.

The more important of the new rules adopted at the recent meeting of the Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen are given underneath, and are worthy of careful persual by those who bestride the nickel plated vehicle and are careful to preserve their amateur status:

A. Any amateur wilfully competing at races not held under the rules of the Board or rules approved by the Board shall be liable to suspension from the race track for such a time as the Racing Board may determine, and amateurs are notified that to compete against any rider who has been suspended will render them liable to the same penalty.

B. The Racing Board will receive and pass upon all claims for competition and time records. The former must be made at an open meeting. If required claimants must furnish a statement from the judges and timekeepers, together with a sworn statement from a competent surveyor certifying the measurement of the track. When a record has been proved to the satisfaction of the Board it shall be published in the official organ, and stand as a record on the books of the Board. No record made at a meeting not governed by League rules will be considered. No record made on the Lord's Day will be considered. The Board will enter no competition record on its books that is not made at an open meeting, of which at least one week's notice has been given. The Board will enter no record on its books that is made on a board track or under cover. A competition record must be made in a race between men. A time record may be made with or without pace makers.

G. Any cycle or athletic club will be allowed under special supervision of this Board to pay the entrance fees and actual necessary traveling expenses of a member or members whom they may desire to represent them at race meetings, but without this special sanction no competitor in amateur events shall accept from his own club or from a club granting sports at which he competes any payment for his expenses, under penalty of suspension from the track for a time at the discretion of the Board.

CRICKET NOTES.

The Metropolitan District League held a special meeting, May 12, in this city. The Fort Hamilton was the only one of the twelve clubs not then represented. The resignation of M. R. Cobb, who has acted as secretary since the last annual meeting, was received with regret. Mr. Cobb has left for Chicago. Clifford G. Turner, of the New Jersey A. C., who is also treasurer of the League, was prevailed upon to accept the dual office. The proposition of the League to play the Boston game between May 25 and 29 was not acceptable to the cricketers of that city, and it was agreed to play the match on the dates originally scheduled by the committee in Philadelphia—May 29 and 30—at Boston. The committee then proceeded to select a team. This proceeding was objected to by one delegate, who maintained that the action was unconstitutional unless the secretary of the League had received from the secretary of each club a list of players to represent them from whom the team should be selected. The bylaws are very clear on this point, reading: "3. The secretary of each club shall forward to the secretary of the League a list of players not less than fourteen days before each match, from which the Executive Committee shall select the team to represent the League against outside teams." The protest was overruled, however, and a team was selected which, if sent, will insure New York's nonparticipation in more than one game for the championship of the United States.

The Alameda Club played the California eleven May 3 at San Francisco, for the first time and met with a bad defeat. W. Robertson, besides performing the remarkable bowling feat of taking six wickets for five runs, put together the fine score of 136. This is by far the largest individual inning ever made on the Pacific Coast, and the first century scored by any local cricketer. Robertson made his runs by good, sterling cricket taking no undue liberties and punishing loose balls hard. He gave a chance when he had made about 80 and two others after reaching his 100, when he commenced to play carelessly, but these blemishes did not detract from what was a wonderfully fine performance. The score of the California Club was 218, that of Alameda 24.

We acknowledge the receipt of The American Cricket Annual for 1891, compiled and edited by Jerome Flannery, of the Cosmopolitan Club, of this city, assisted by Clifford G. Turner, of the New Jersey Athletic Club. This cleverly compiled and neatly printed work contains the statistics of the doings with bat and ball of the leading clubs in the United States and Canada, together with an excellent review of the season of 1890, and other interesting matter, making it useful to cricketers generally as a work of reference. We see that A. E. Smith and Pacey are credited rather ambiguously with putting on "220 runs for the second wicket" in a game played Aug. 9, 1890, at Philadelphia. If this means that Smith and Pacey scored "220 runs in partnership" it is a mistake, as in the accounts and score of the game in question published in the Philadelphia papers of the following day, we find that Smith and Pacey went first to the bat, and made 208 runs before the first wicket fell. As Pacey retired shortly after Smith lost his wicket, 220 may have been put on the telegraph for the fall of the second wicket, but it certainly was not made in partnership as one would be led to believe from the twice repeated paragraph in the Annual.

The international match between the United States and Canada will be played July 13, 14 and 15 at Toronto, this being decided upon at a recent meeting of the Ontario Cricket Association. On July 10 and 11 the team representing Canada will play against eighteen of Canada.

The unfavorable weather on May 16 caused the postponement of several games in Philadelphia, the only game played for the local championship being that between the Belmont and Tioga Clubs. The Tioga team's total in the first inning reached 73, while the Belmont team had made 171 runs for six wickets when time was called. McCall, with 49 not out, and Wood, with 45, were the chief scorers for the winners, the latter making his runs in about fifteen minutes. The Philadelphia Club visited Riverton, N. J., and defeated the home team by 54 to 28, the totals of the first inning. In a match between eleven of the old and fifteen of the new members of the North End Club, the former won by 86 to 67, thanks to the remarkable bowling of Eastwood, who captured ten wickets, all clean bowled, at the cost of only fourteen runs.

In the metropolitan district rain interfered greatly with the schedule on May 16. Two games were played, however, the Cosmopolitans winning a game at Clifton, N. J., with the Majestic Athletic Club by the score of 25 to 17, and Kings County defeating New York at Prospect Park, Brooklyn, by 91 to 65. In the first mentioned game not a man got double figures, while in the other Congdon, who made 26 not out for the victors, and Skyne, who secured 22 for the vanquished, were the top scorers.

The Surrey team commenced their season at the Oval, London, Eng., with a match against Leicestershire May 4 and 5, winning by 73 runs. Their next game at the Oval was played May 7 and 8, when Surrey scored 494 runs, and getting rid of Hampshire for 88 and 66 won by an inning and 342 runs. Lockwood and Henderson put on 179 runs in partnership, the former making 100 and the latter 105 before being retired.

At Wilmington, Del., May 16, the home team defeated the West Chester Club. The visitors batted first and scored 38, Perot with 11 being the only man to make any stand against the excellent bowling of Homewood and Turton, the former capturing five wickets for ten runs. Delaware then, by fine batting, rolled up the large total of 186, the highest scorer being Tatnall 50, not out.

The Tacony team journeyed Trenton, N. J., and were easily defeated by the home team, by the score of 161 for three wickets to 90. Mart and the Mountford brothers did the heavy batting for Trenton.

The Harvard College played a draw game with Lowell, May 9. Garrett batted well for 54 out of the 84 runs scored by the collegians for the loss of nine wickets. The Lowell eleven made 104 runs.

George Wright is batting and bowling better than ever this season. Playing for the Boston Athletic team against the Somerville eleven May 9, he led in batting, with a record of 45 runs and then retired, while in bowling he captured eight wickets for only four runs. He retired four batsmen with four consecutive balls, three being clean bowled.

W. G. Grace, the champion English cricketer, is batting in his old fine form. In a game between the Thornbury and St. George Clubs, played April 27, he scored 174, making no fewer than ten hits out of the ground.

THE RING.

Hill's New Headquarters.

Harry Hill, the veteran sporting man, for many years proprietor of the noted resort known throughout the land as "The Exchange," on East Houston Street, this city, has, after many ups and downs since leaving the old stand, finally settled down as boniface of the old East New York Hotel, at the beginning of the Jamaica Plank Road. The hotel, which is of the old fashioned sort where solid comfort, without style, can be had, was formerly presided over by genial "Uncle Billy" Whalen, and is situated almost opposite the hostelry in which Sim Hoagland, the famous driver, was wont to entertain the horsemen with good cheer and stories of road and track. Harry Hill proposes to keep up the reputation of the old resort as one of the best stopping places "on the road," and under his supervision it ought to do a prosperous business. Don't forget to stop while you're out for an airing.

Death of a Once Noted Boxer.

Bob Perry, the veteran teacher of sparring, died at his residence, 116 East Pratt Street, Baltimore, Md., on May 2, death being due to general debility and old age. He was born at East Baltimore, in 1812, and in his day was one of the best sparrers in the country. Him and George Kensett for some time kept a sparring school on Holliday Street, between Baltimore and Fayette, and Perry afterwards was proprietor of a commodious gymnasium at the corner of Commerce Street and Exchange Place. Later on he was associated with Junius Brutus Booth in the management of the National Theatre, better known as the "Mud Theatre," at the corner of North and Saratoga Streets, a venture that did not prove successful. Perry again opened a boxing academy, and afterwards was proprietor of the first pistol gallery ever opened in the Monumental City, which was located on Calvert Street, opposite Barnum's Hotel. He was an old bachelor, and for many years before his demise lived with the family of John Kellar. He was one of the spectators of the Hyer and Sullivan battle in 1849, and was a warm friend and admirer of the stalwart American champion. He was buried at Loudon Park.

JIMMY DIME, of Amsterdam, and Jimmy Carroll, formerly of Harlem, fought for a purse of $500 at a sporting resort near Amsterdam, N. Y., on the night of May 12. The latter was never in it, and received his quietus in the third round.

HARRY WEBB, the all around manager and sporting hustler, is now located near Denver, Col., where he is manager of the Lake View Hotel, a Summer resort with facilities for boating, fishing and out door sports generally.

THE NEWEST PLAYS.

"Niobe" Acted for the First Time in America at Philadelphia.

This three act comedy, by Harry and Edward A. Paulton, was acted for the first time in America, at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., May 11. It was originally performed at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, Liverpool, Eng., Sept. 1, 1890. Originally the action of the piece took place in England. This has been changed to suit the American people. The action of the comedy takes place in New York City, the present day, in the drawing room of Peter Amos Dunn. The story unfolded is briefly something like this: Peter Amos Dunn, manager of the Universal Insurance Co., has insured for a friend, named Tompkins, an art crank, a certain valuable statue of "Niobe." For safety he elects to send it to his own home, which is under the dominion of his wife's family (two sisters and a brother), who live with him. Dunn is not a sentimentalist. He is a decent, good hearted ignoramus, without too great a regard for the truth, and with very few ideas beyond the one suggested in his catch phrase: "There's no money in it." He is having the electric light put into his house, and the workman entrusted with the insulation wraps the wire 'round the feet of the statue of Niobe. When the electric current is turned on it vivifies the statute, who promptly strolls down the stage and holds a conversation with Dunn in a vein of repartee that is exceedingly clever and amusing. Dunn's family have gone to the theatre to see "Pygmalion and Galatea," and ere they return he induces the fair Niobe to exchange her flowing robes for the modern costume of a new governess, who has sent her portmanteau on before her, but has not herself arrived, and in this guise she is introduced to the family. Complications of the droll-est kind, misunderstandings, humorous in idea and execution, heartburnings and jealousies ensue; but in the end all is made pleasant, and the elderly proprietor of the statue makes her his wife, for she does not, like Galatea, go back to marble. There is a parallel plot concerning the love adventures of a selfish youth, named Cornelius Griffin, who has, or thinks he has, blighted the young affections of a maiden, named Ethel Mifton, who is sister to the expected governess. The cast:

Peter Amos Dunn	Wm. F. Owen
Cornelius Griffin	Charles Coote
Phineas Ianings	Theo. M. Brown
Jefferson Tompkins	Arthur H. Bell
Parker G. Silox	W. T. Melville
Helen Griffin	Mrs. E. A. Eberle
Beatrice Silox	Maud Edna Hall
Madeline Mifton	Ruth Hamilton
Caroline Dunn	Alfa Perry
Mary	Josie Stauffer
Hattie Griffin	Jessie Storey
Niobe	Carrie Turner

"The Patrol."

The mysterious murder of Millionaire Snell, of Chicago, in January, 1888, forms the basis of this interesting five act melodrama, by Scott Marble a cat, a sacred animal in Egypt, and to impose the sentence of death, provided for offenses of this kind. In consideration of Cyrus' past services the sentence is not executed, but the hand of Janina is, nevertheless, refused. Cyrus becomes enraged, swears vengeance, gathers soldiers about him and camps in the desert. The second act shows Cyrus and his soldiers camping in an oasis on the border of the desert. The great pyramids loom up prominently in the distance. It is midnight, and the sentries are doing duty. The announcement is made that the Khedive and suite, while on a journey, had been captured. They are brought before Cyrus, who agreed to give the Khedive his liberty in exchange for the hand of Janina. It is also agreed that Cyrus shall return to the Khedive's allegiance and escort him on his visit to the Sultan. The Sultan's palace furnishes the scene of action for the third act. The Khedive presents Janina to the Sultan, who is about to wed her, when Samarantha discloses Cyrus to be the son of the Khedive. All is then changed. Cyrus weds Janina, Ormoo finds a companion in Mareeta, and the old ruler himself falls victim to the charms of Samarantha. The costumes, made at New Orleans, were rich and appriate. The scenery, painted by Frank Cox, was beautiful. Among the elegant stage pictures presented by Mr. Cox were the meeting place of the first act, with the Khedive's palace in the distance, an interior of the palace, the pyramids and desert of the second act, with moonlight effect, and the Sultan's palace and garden of roses, set for the third act, illuminated with electric lights.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

AT LONDON, May 11, Royal Albert Hall was packed on the occasion of the farewell concert given by Sims Reeves, the celebrated tenor. One of the chief numbers heard was Verdi's duet, "Ah Morir," in which the veteran tenor sang with Christine Nilsson, who appeared charmingly, and was in as fine voice as ever. The duet evoked the greatest enthusiasm. Mme. Nordica and Mrs. W. B. Eaton also sang. Henry Irving delivered the farewell address, written for the occasion by Walter Pollock, having closed his own theatre for the evening in order to be present. Sims Reeves, in a few well chosen words, then expressed his grateful thanks to those present. In the audience were the Prince of Wales and many other prominent personages.

MODJESKA finished her last engagement at Prague, April 30. The occasion was made the opportunity for an ovation in her honor. In addition to an unusual number of floral offerings, she was presented by the committee of the Theatre Luppald, a national institution named by the Bohemian Parliament, with a laurel crown of silver, with this inscription: "To the Queen of Dramatic Art." The entire audience rose to their feet during the presentation, and shouted: "Long life to Modjeska." She was also the recipient of a number of addresses from Bohemian societies, as well as many congratulatory telegrams from members of the Bohemian parliament, distinguished men of letters, and others throughout Poland. No actress of today, with one exception, has a more extended or higher reputation than Mme. Modjeska.

THE FOLLOWING cablegram comes from London, dated May 13: "John R. Rogers did not leave London for Naples on the Orizaba, as it was stated it was his intention to do. He came back on the tender which took the passengers out, and is now living with Minnie Palmer here. Charles J. Abud, the well known theatrical manager, under whom Minnie Palmer was to play an engagement, threatens to sue that lady for breach of contract, as she refuses to pay the forfeit set down in the agreement. The general opinion is that the whole affair has been conceived and carried out as a gigantic advertisement for Miss Palmer and 'My Sweetheart.'"

"CAPITAL AND LABOR," which was produced at the Pavilion, London, March 9, is not new. Geo. Kimberley, manager and treasurer of the "Two Orphans" Co., writes as follows from the Alexandra Theatre, Southend, under date of May 3: "The piece has been on the road since Feb. 14, 1889, when it was produced at the Lyceum Theatre, Crewe, Eng., first under the management of Arthur Rousbey. Since last August 6, and C. Imeson, of Middlesbro, have been the managers."

"DR. BILL" has recently been done at Berlin, Ger., under the title of "Dr. Jojo."

IN reference to the statement made by their Boston lawyer, that J. B. Mason and Marion Manola could not be married for six months without committing bigamy, Mr. Mason says: "I am bitterly humbled and humiliated over this matter, but our marriage here is a perfectly legal one. Miss Manola's counsel assured us both that we could be married at once, after the decree nisi, and that it would be perfectly legal so long as the two contracting parties never wished an annulment. This satisfied us as far as America is concerned, but I could not take any chances. I went to Consul General New, who assured me that everything was all right and who subsequently witnessed our marriage. We acted in good faith throughout. My wife is heart broken over the matter. If her counsel actually made all the statements he is credited with he certainly misled us utterly. God knows how things have gone wrong lately, but Mrs. Mason and I are blameless."

A NATIVE of New York visiting the Friedrich Wilhelmstadt Theatre, Berlin, where "Nanon" has just been revived, might very well imagine himself again at the old Thalia in the Bowery, for Jenny Stubel plays the title role, Herr Link and Fraulein Offeney also appear. The revival of the piece has been a great success.

"FAUST UP TO DATE" will be played by an English company at Concordia Music Hall, Berlin, in June.

IBSEN'S "CROWN PRETENDERS," which had been fully rehearsed at the Royal Playhouse, Berlin, was suddenly withdrawn, and will not be produced until next season, or such time as will enable the Emperor to be present at the rehearsals, as he was in the case of "The New Lord."

"HEDDA GABLER," at the London Vaudeville Theatre is still drawing crowds, and Ibsen has definitely decided to visit London this week. "The Lady of the Sea" proved a failure.

"L'ENFANT PRODIGUE," at the London Prince of Wales, has reached its fiftieth performance, and is still running prosperously.

ROSE NORREYS has prepared a play, which is classed as a "dumb fairy story," in which there will be only three parts. The music will be by Ivan Caryll.

M. MASSENET, the French composer, is personally superintending the rehearsals of "Manon Lescaut" at the Royal Italian Opera. "Otello" is not likely to be produced for another month.

ALICE ATHERTON and Willie Edouin have been acting successfully in "Our Daughters."

AT the London Savoy the last weeks of "The Gondoliers" are announced.

SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN will personally conduct the one hundredth performance of "Ivanhoe" at D'Oyly Carte's Royal English Opera House May 23. The management of the Shaftsbury Avenue place of entertainment points with pride to the fact that this is the longest consecutive run ever attained in this city by a serious English opera.

HENRY IRVING'S revival of "The Corsican Brothers" at the London Lyceum will be memorable for its scenic splendor. This production and Ellen Terry's appearance in "Nance Oldfield" were the chief dramatic events of the week.

THE 225th performance of "La Cigale" at the London Lyric occurred May 19.

THE HEBREW AMERICAN OPERA CO. are coining money and winning laurels in Bucharest, where the prima donna, Miss Finkelstein, is creating quite a furor.

BRONSON HOWARD'S play, "The Henrietta," has proved a bad failure at London, and notice of its withdrawal was posted May 16, at the Avenue Theatre. Henry Lee, who has been managing the Avenue for the past three months has succeeded in making a grand fiasco. Bailiffs have been in the house for the past week. The play made an artistic success, but it was badly presented and mismanaged.

MRS. LANGTRY has decided not to play at the London Drury Lane in "Formosa." She has given up her big Cadogan Square house, and is living unostentatiously near Regent's Park. Private advices are to the effect that Mrs. Langtry is soon to be married to George Abington Baird, a wealthy English gentlemen, whose stable is well known on the turf. This may possibly account for the sudden cancellation of Mrs. Langtry's dates in this country for next season, and the recent sale of her theatrical wardrobe.

H. J. SARGENT, who will be remembered in connection with Mrs. Churchill Jodrell's New York fiasco, has closed his attempt at running a high toned music hall at London. He called his place the Cagliostromantheon.

ESTHER, the eldest daughter of Selina Dolaro, did a smart bit of business last week. She only reached London from New York a week ago, and forty-eight hours later produced "Bella Demonia" for copyright purposes, thus balking E. Heron-Allen.
